It was charged he re-entered the United States without a passport after visiting relatives in the islands. Efforts of Congressman Charles L. WINANT TRAPS MAN AS FUGITIVE SUSPECT

Tilton, N. H., Nov. 16.—A man resembling Dell Fellows, escaped convict and outlaw, was arrested here today by Chief of Police Fifield and Governor John G. Winant.

The man gave the name of John Joseph Donovan and said he came from Springfield, Mass. Persons who knew Fellows were summoned here to attempt identification.

Governor Winant informed the police of the presence in this city of the suspect and the man was arrested on a baker's wagon where he was riding.

Meanwhile, undaunted by their failure to find Fellows in the woods where they believed he had been trapped, a posse of a thousand men, including two companies of National Guardsmen, began a second search of the timberland near the town of Meredith.

On the first attempt, the khaki-clad soldiers were led by Governor John G. Winant, clad in his boots and slicker. A cordon was thrown around a 300-acre tract of brush and woods, but when it had been drawn in to the centre of a circle no sign of Fellows materialized. The search lasted for five hours.

Council was held and the second searching party were ordered to enter every Summer cottage and maple sugar camp in the woods. Only a few of these were searched in the first attempt to ferret out the outlaw.

Fellows is believed to have established himself, with a meagre sup-

MISSING COLLEGE GIRL HAD PLENTY OF MONEY

Northampton, Nov. 16.—In an official proclamation, Mayor Felker of Northampton today called upon all citizens to aid in the search for Alice M. Corbett, 19-year-old Smith College junior, missing four days.

The call was a last attempt to solve the mystery of the vanished girl, declared by her father to be well supplied with funds—probably more than $100.

Before the Mayor's proclamation, James H. Corbett, father of Alice, said he had almost lost hope. He made an appeal to the great body of Masons and to Y. M. C. A. members for assistance in finding his child.

Corbett, a Utica, N. Y., manufacturer, is a member of the Thirty-second Degree Scottish Rite and a Shriner., and it was to his associates in the organizations and Blue Lodge of Masons that he appealed today.

At the same time a sporty yellow roadster was being trailed down in the hunt for the missing Alice, and hospitals and wooded sections were being searched.

Declaring that his hope of finding his girl was almost gone, Corbett, the father, sent out the following telegram to Masons and Y. M. C. A. members:

"Please make special appeal to Shriners, Masons and Y. M. C. A. members and friends to help locate my daughter.

"Have no information as to her

HOOVER SAYS U. S. MUST QUIT SHIPPING BUSINESS

Washington, Nov. 16 (I.N.S.).—Rapping the United States Shipping Board for its refusal to "go along" with President Coolidge, Secretary of Commerce Hoover today made public what is regarded as the administration's merchant marine policy.

In a letter to Representative White of Maine, read to the shipping conference of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Hoover made a lot of recommendations.

"We will never have a satisfactory merchant marine until it is owned and maintained by private enterprise," Hoover declared.

"Government operation and competition with private enterprise, with the Treasury as a reserve fund, dulls private initiative."

Pointing out that the Shipping Board was conceived originally for regulation of discriminations in ocean traffic, Hoover characterized it as hopeless as a form of organization to build up and administer the merchant marine.

TWO DANCE PARTNERS OF DEAD GIRL PUT ON GRILL BY POLICE

Far from satisfied with the stories of the manner in which Emeline Anna Hopkins, prize beauty, model and showgirl, took her death plunge in the apartment house at No. 1305 Commonwealth avenue, the police today recalled two men friends of the girl for further questioning.

The beauty, also known as Olive Jackson, was found dying at the bottom of the hallway following a party at the Commonwealth avenue address.

She had plunged head-first from the fourth-story landing. Her body struck several times on the way down and her skull was fractured.

CURLEY DEMANDS THAT COPS WATCH NEW CLUB

Mayor James M. Curley today made public a letter which he sent Herbert A. Wilson, Police Commissioner, in which he severely arraigns the so-called "night clubs" of the city, and in which he also opposes the Argonaut, a club at No. 1 Rowes Wharf being completed for rich Bostonians.

"I am of such opinion that the existence of such a club in such a place should meet with the constant and special attention of the police," the Mayor wrote the Police Commissioner.

"I am not impressed by the character and activity of 'night clubs' in Boston," the Mayor wrote.

The Mayor calls attention to the collapse of the Pickwick Club on Beach street in which more than 40 lives were lost.

The location for such a club on Rowes Wharf is especially objectionable, declares the Mayor's letter. He also critizes the nature of the interior decorations, especially those in the women's retiring room where he declares a large statue of the Virgin Mary is located.

Unless the club is conducted properly, the mayor in his letter threatens to call a meeting of representatives of the various religious societies of the city to object to the club.

KIP WON BY 'THREATS' IN GIRL'S LOVE NOTES

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 16 (A.P.)—The fervor of the love letters which Alice Beatrice Jones, daughter of a negro taxi driver, first sent to her husband, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, during their courtship, gradually changed to an insistent threat that he would lose her unless he married her.

Today's series of letters, introduced at resumption of the trial of young Rhinelander's annulment suit, are filled with demands for marriage and at the same time promise the greatest secrecy until the wealthy young scion of an aristocratic family should have attained his majority.

On November 4, 1922, Alice wrote:

"If you can't come home I will have to go away with someone else."

"It was at this time that Leonard was attending school. Two months later Alice was even more outspoken. "You are going to be mine, now or never," she wrote. "I have thrown down two chances for you. I would keep things a dead, dead secret. After you are mine I would keep quiet until you are your own boss."

Again on May 15, 1923, she wrote: "I deserve everything I get from you. I had had hundreds of chances to make dates but I have turned everything down."

This attempt by the plaintiff's lawyers to show that Alice sought to make young Rhinelander jealous was a continuation of the same effort of last week when her letters contained references to various stage celebrities whom she had met, and to rivals for her hand.

In the Fall of 1923 she wrote an-

GOVERNOR WINANT, IN HIPBOOTS AND SLICKER, HUNTS OUTLAW

IN WOODS FOR FIVE HOURS

ply of food, in the thickest part of the timberland, a section of about six acres in the heart of the 200 acre tract, where Frank Pelotte, former Ashland policeman, exchanged shots with him on Sunday.

The storm obliterated tracks that Fellows may have left and two Doberman Pinscher dogs were unable to pick up his scent. The woods are rain-drenched and the roads deep in mud. The second dog to fall was Trock, owned by O. J. Anderson of Taunton, Mass.

USE MACHINE GUN.

Fellows has been at large in this part of the country since he shot Constable George E. Dow of Ashland, N. H., a week ago. Dow attempted to arrest him as a fugitive from Nashville, Tenn., penitentiary.

Machine guns were brought here by National Guard units from Franklin. The other unit is Battery C, 197th Field Artillery, Laconia. Each company numbers 45 men and officers.

The mobilization of the guard units came on orders of Governor Winant, who directed Adjutant General Howard to rush troops from the Laconia district to the scene of the manhunt without delay.

REWARD INCREASED.

The reward for the capture of Fellows—dead or alive—has been increased from $300 to $500.

Clyde Deal, a local resident, reported to the leaders of the posses that when he went into a lonely wooded-road in his automobile a man he claims was Fellows tried to steal his machine. He, too, declared the man had been wounded.

Not being armed, Deal left the spot and gave the word of the man's presence as quickly as possible.

An emergency war telephone line has been laid through the district and through the woods, in order posse leaders may keep in constant touch with one another.

Lyle French, known as the human "bloodhound," famed trapper, has been put in charge of one section of the posse and is now deep in the woods.

REVEL VICTIM

She died without regaining consciousness in St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Although the police have branded the case as accidental, they are continuing their investigation.

The party started in a dance hall. It had its final chapter in the Commonwealth avenue apartment areaway.

Someone suggested that when the dance hall closed the party adjourn to the apartment. This was done. The apartment is leased by Dr. and Mrs. Robert D. Kiley. They were out of the city.

In the party was Joseph L. Sullivan, brother-in-law of Dr. Kiley, Arthur Garrity of Fall River, Mrs. Pearl McGuire of Florence street, Somerville; Raymond Lee of Worcester street, South End, and Miss Hopkins.

After there had been several dances in the apartment the others declare Miss Hopkins expressed a desire to leave for her home. She called a taxi and left the apartment presumably to meet the taxi at the door.

The music of the phonograph inside drowned her screams or the sound of the crash when her body struck the tile floor of the hallway.

Sullivan and Garrity were taken to the Brighton police station pending an investigation, but were released when the police announced themselves as satisfied the young woman's death was accidental.

The dead girl had once won the title of "Miss Nantasket" and again that of "Miss New England" in beauty contests.

Police investigation of a report that the young woman was married resulted in a finding that there was nothing to prove this claim.

DAMAGE IN STORM HEAVY

Earth tremors and falling meteors accompanied the rain and wind that soaked and harried New England today, causing damage of thousands of dollars to property and nearly causing the death of a boy.

Charles H. DiCico of Framingham, a senior at Worcester Academy, narrowly escaped death when a chimney on Davis Hall, a dormitory, toppled over in the wind, crashed through the roof and fell with timbers and masonry on the bed in which he was sleeping.

An earthquake lasting three hours was recorded on the seismograph at Harvard University, but according to Professor Kirtley Mather the quake was from 1,500 to 2,000 miles distant.

At Hartford, Ct., however, tremors of short duration were felt. Telephone and electric light companies reported considerable damage, both from the tremors and a gale of nearly forty miles an hour that swept the State.

The meteoric display was witnessed in several parts of New England. Residents of Roslindale reported a meteor falling somewhere between Bellevue water tower and Sunset boulevard. Others were observed at Brunswick, Me.; Keene, N. H., and in Connecticut.

Persons who observed meteors are asked by the Harvard Observatory professors to report altitude, location, direction and form of the falling bodies and other phenomena connected with them. Dr. Willard J. Fisher of the observatory is to lecture from Station WEEI on "Shooting Stars" on Tuesday, December 1.

CELLARS FLOODED.

Greater Boston suffered considerable damage from wind and rain. Telephone poles were blown over, carrying wires with them and plunging several parts of the city into darkness. Cellars were flooded and scores of signboards wrecked.

Back Bay apartments on Queensberry and Peterboro streets were without light when the electric current was shut off by falling poles. A pole falling on West Selden street, Dorchester, plunged that section in darkness.

A large plate glass window in front of the store at No. 404 Neponset avenue, was crushed. A flagpole in front of the Whittier School was snapped off by the wind and fell across Southern avenue and is hanging rom a telephone wire.

At Haverhill, a short section of tracks on the Georgetown branch of the Boston & Maine was washed out, four trains were canceled and commuters were carried in town on electric cars.

While the storm was at its height in Haverhill robbers broke into the Brassett street station of the Boston & Maine and cracked the safe there. Police attempting to reach the scene by automobile were delayed when their car became stalled in the flooded streets. The robbers escaped without any loot.

In Lowell also the storm was intense. The city was plunged in darkness when four light poles on Varnum street were snapped off by the wind. Walter Klatax of Melrose avenue was seriously injured there when the automobile he was driving collided with another car. Klotax said that he was unable to see clearly because of the storm.

HOSPITAL IN DARKNESS.

The Lawrence General Hospital was in total darkness for several minutes when the lighting system in that city was disrupted by the wind.

The United States Weather Bureau anticipates fair and colder

Boston was hard hit by the storm. No new storm centres were visible today.

Considering the brief duration of the first storm today, the rainfall, 1.15 inches, is remarkably heavy.

The temperature remained up, 52 degrees being the lowest recorded for the last twenty-four hours.

Boston was hard hit by th storm. In the South End windows and signs were broken. Billboards torn down and lighting and telephone service temporarily disrupted.

ACCUSED OF HOLDUPS IN 3 DRUG STORES

Gangster Shot in a Brighton Pharmacy Is Dying From Nervy Cop's Bullets

Three more drug store holdups were pinned today on John Keating of South Boston and George Murphy of Roxbury and Hartford, Ct., arrested at the end of chase after they, with Carl Gazella of Fellows street, Roxbury, are alleged to have held up the Cummings drug store in Union square, Brighton.

Gazella, who was also identified as having been implicated in one of the three holdups, is dying at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

He was dropped in the drugstore with two bullets fired by Patrolman Edward Daly of the Brighton station, after Daly had been shot by Gazella. Another bullet sent at Daly was halted by a notebook in the policeman's pocket.

Murphy and Keating, who claim they are Frederick Callahan and John J. Kelley of Brooklyn, N. Y., were identified today by Charles J. Lamb and Bernard F. Cullen as the two men who recently robbed the [illegible] Pharmacy at No. 904 Hunt- [illegible] avenue of $150.

MBRIDGE HOLDUP.

Murphy and Keating were also identified by Arnold H. Epstein of No. 419 Harvard street, Brookline, as the same thugs who held him up in his pharmacy at that address, after cutting telephone wires, and stole $200.

The third identification of the two men—Gazella was identified at the hospital as their companion in this holdup—was made by Edward A. Malone, who said the trio held him up in his drugstore at No. 1770 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and obtained $70.

Daly surprised the trio while they were holding up Harry J. Cummings, proprietor of the store.

When Keating and Murphy fled the drug store in an auto after the fall of Gazella, Paul Strang of No. 68 North Beacon street gave chase, picking up Patrolman Orrin Taylor on the way. At Coolidge Corner the car of the fugitives ran into the end car of a traffic jam. There Taylor arrested them.

GRILLED BY POLICE.

According to the police, Keating is the same man who, last January, in company with two armed thugs, held up Miss Fannie Glatter of No. 868 Columbus avenue, and robbed her of a $1,000 fur coat. At that time he was said to be on parole from the Concord Reformatory.

Keating and Murphy were grilled at police headquarters today in a number of holdup cases and more than twoscore policemen and special officers looked the pair over.

EUROPE'S EXPORTS MEAN "HUSTLE," SAYS FILENE

Washington, Nov. 16.—American business will find it increasingly difficult to locate adequate outlets in the markets of the world for its surplus exports for some years to come, Edward A. Filene, president of William Filene's Sons Company, told the Association of National Advertisers, in an address here today. This condition is caused by the pressure of European nations to export their goods, under a scale of living lower than that of the United States, he said. This would create super-competition in this country, which would mean a domestic war of price cutting and wage reduction, Mr. Filene believed. National advertising, he said, is one of the factors that are creating commercial conditions advantageous to the United States.

ORPHANAGE "WOLF" GETS THE LIMIT AS SENTENCE

New York, Nov. 16 (A.P.)—Harry Wilson Johnson, former superintendent of the Long Island Baptist Orphanage, who last week pleaded guilty to attacking a fifteen-year-old girl, today was sentenced to serve from five to ten years at hard labor in Sing Sing. The sentence, given by Supreme Court Justice Cropsey, was the maximum. In passing it Justice Cropsey said: "You are fortunate the Legislature has made such an absurd enactment as to make it impossible for me to give you a much longer sentence."

Patrolman Daly of the Brighton station surprised three men holding up the Cummings drug store in Union square. They opened fire on him. He shot down Carl Gazella, now dying at City Hospital. His two alleged pals, seen above, fled in an auto and were caught by civilians and Patrolman Orrin Taylor. Today Daly, who had been shot in the shoulder, found his life had been saved by a notebook and loose papers over his heart which had stopped another bullet.

BUILDING FOR 1,000 AUTOS

Vigorous protests against erection of a 1,000-car garage in the Park Square development area were made today to the Board of Street Commissioners hearing a petition of the Park Square Garage Company, Inc., for authority to erect the building.

Officials of the garage corporation said they planned to erect an eight-story building at a cost of $2,100,000 on St. James avenue in the rear of the Paine Furniture Company building and opposite the Park square building. The garage, they said, would be architecturally in keeping with other buildings there.

General Edgar P. Champlin, J. Sumner Draper and William J. McDonald, for the Park Square Trust, said the erection of a garage would prove a serious detriment to development of the district. It was revealed plans are under way for construction of a big department store there.

Under examination by Frank G. Barrows, a director of the garage corporation, it was stated by those opposing the petition that plans for a garage to accommodate 600 cars were included in the department store project, but it would be solely for patrons of the store.

William J. McDonald denied he had tried to secure the 25,000 square feet of land now held by the garage corporation.

Others opposing the petition were Guy W. Cox, vice-president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, William Nolan, secretary of the Salada Tea Company, and Frank W. Knowlton.

NUNS FLEE BURNING AUTO

Seven nuns, being driven from Brighton Academy to St. John's School in the North End, were driven from their automobile today in Commercial street, opposite North End Park, when the machine caught fire.

The nuns left the car rapidly and firemen, summoned by Fred E. Weigel, the driver, of No. 84 Hichford street, Brighton, extinguished the blaze. Then the nuns were taken to the school in a passing automobile.

CRIMSON APOLOGIZES FOR UPROOTING BROWN GOALS

An apology to students of Brown University for the uprooting of goal posts after the Harvard victory over the Bruins was offered by the Harvard Crimson, the college daily, in an editorial today.

The article states Harvard students regret the unwarranted display of unruliness and that they are ashamed of the spirit of vandalism which displayed itself in the destruction of goal posts. Although athletics are supposed to promote courtesy and fair play, the Crimson declares, the benefits of sports do not extend in equal degree to all the spectators.

The college paper also lauded the Harvard team for its victory in the face of criticisms and jibes of sporting writers.

KILLED BY PAIL OF CEMENT

William P. Kelliher, twenty-four, of No. 15 Landseer street, West Roxbury, was instantly killed today when he was struck on the head by a bucket of cement.

Kelliher, an electrician, was employed by the Lord Electrical Company and was working on a garage under construction at the corner of Cambridge and Bowdoin squares.

The signal to hoist the bucket of cement had just been given and the load was about fifteen feet up when the rope broke. Kelliher was standing beneath the bucket.

Beats All Pennsy Trains in Race to Dying Sister

New York, Nov. 16.—A special Pennsylvania train bearing Guy Waggoner, wealthy Fort Worth oil man, to the bedside of his dying sister here, roared into the Pennsylvania station this afternoon, having made the run from St. Louis in twenty hours and twenty-six minutes.

This was three hours and thirty-four minutes faster than the running time of the line's best train, and was considered a record run. The track was cleared for the special train.

An automobile took Waggoner to the hospital.

The train is said to have cost Waggoner $5,800, and $5,000 more is to be divided among the train crew.

FIVE MILL MEN ARE BAILED

Lowell, Nov. 16.—Pleading not guilty to various indictments found against them by a Grand Jury probing their activities in the management of the Hamilton Manufacturing Company of Lowell, five former officials of the company were today admitted to bail of $2,500 each by Judge Bishop in Superior Criminal Court.

The five were James A. Lidell, former bookkeeper for the company; Arthur R. Sharpe, former treasurer; Thomas Prendergast, one time assistant treasurer, and Albert D. Milliken and Albert L. Lalline, former agents.

Lidell is held on a secret indictment warrant, charging forty-four counts. The indictments allege conspiracy to defraud, making and publishing false entries, deceiving stockholders, and make other charges against the former officials.

ROTHERMERE CAME TO HUB AS 'SMITH'

English Newspaper Magnate Shuns Reception; in U. S. Merely for Rest

The already large family of Smith took in another member recently for six days, who today proved to be England's great newspaper proprietor, Viscount Rothermere.

While noted on the passenger list of the S.S. Franconia according to his true identity, his fellow passengers knew him and fraternized with him as Mr. Smith of London.

"Rothermere wishes to rest," said G. Ward Price, who is acting as his personal representative during his stay in America. "He is interested in America's problems but did not visit here for any interest either political, business or otherwise other than rest from business."

The other members of the party, all of whom are registered at the Copley Plaza, are A. S. Fuller, E. A. Sursham and E. H. Fells, of London.

Viscount Rothermere is reputed to be the wealthiest newspaper magnate in England, his most prominent publication being the London Daily Mail of which Mr. Price is foreign correspondent. Upon the death of his brother, Lord Northcliffe, he assumed control of publications valued at more than two hundred million dollars.

During his few days' stay in Boston he intends to visit the places of interest in this city.

Mr. Price said that the viscount has received scores of invitations chiefly from British organizations to speak to their members, all of which he has declined.

The itinerary of the trip provides for a few days in Boston followed by a stay of a week in New York, when the party will return to England.

IDENTIFIES 3 CARBARN DEATH DEFENDANTS

Witness Saw Them About the Time That Ferneau Was Slain, He Testifies

Three of the five men on trial in East Cambridge Superior Court in connection with the murder of Edward Ferneau, aged watchman at the Waltham carbarn, were positively identified ot the trial today.

Osborne Wingate of Waltham, milkman and former employe of the Middlesex Street Railway Company testified that about 1:15 a. m. on October 4, he went to the carbarn to meet a mon named Eldridge.

He said he saw Ferneau make his round about 1:15 then left the barn and started toward the lobby and noticed a stranger.

Wingate then positively identified Heinlin a sthe man.

Witness said he later noticed two other men on the tracks near the barn and he identified John Devereaux and John McLaughlin as the pair.

McLaughlin, the witness said, went upstairs. Then Devereaux pointed a revolver at him, witness said, and forced him to lie face down on the floor.

Devereaux later put on a mask, the witness declared, and asked "Is there anybody else around."

"I told him there was the watchman," the witness said.

Asked by the District Attorney what Devereaux said Wingate rehim.'" Deveraux then left the plied, "He said 'alright, we'll get lobby, Wingate testified.

"A short time after he left," said Wingate, "I heard a shot." Later he heard Ferneau moaning "My God my leg," he testified and said that Devereaux reappeared downstairs.

"Devereaux shouted up the stairs, "All right Dutch, to hell with the change, get the bills," said the witness.

AGED JUROR ILL; MACRI TRIAL IS HELD UP

Court Meets and Listens to Arguments on Admissability of Gun Evidence

Litchfield, Ct., Nov. 16.—Another delay faces Olympia Macri, on trial charged with the murder of John Bagnano in New Haven last February, through the illness of one of the jurors.

Mott Darling, the fourth juror drawn, reported to Sheriff Frank H. Turkington that he was ill at his home. Darling is 75 years old and investigation found him to be suffering from throat trouble.

A short session is being held today to settle a dispute between attorneys over the testimony of Sergeant John G. Schmitt, the officer who took the gun away from Miss Macri.

It is expected the trial will be resumed tomorrow morning.

Cambridge, Girl Tells Court Her New Employer, Father of Four, Is Fast Worker

Charging that he had hugged and fondled here a few days after she had been hired as his stenographer, Margaret Puppo, a twenty-year-old Cambridge girl, today, in District Court at East Cambridge, scored a conviction against Peter Lachiano, forty, the father of four children, who occupies a shop at No. 350 Huron avenue.

Lachiano pleaded not guilty, but Judge Stone found against him and fined him $40, which he paid.

Judge Stone told the prosecuting officer to keep a close watch on Lachianos establishment and to investigate the further hiring of girls to work in his store.

Her fuel used up in a struggle with a tremendous gale and mountainous seas, the steam trawl fisherman Sea Gull, with upwards of twenty men aboard, was swept onto the treacherous Nantucket South Shoals today and flashed an SOS for aid.

Two boats, the United Fruit liner Mayari and the steam trawler Petrul, are rushing to her assistance. The Mayari at the time was sixty-nine miles from the Sea Gull.

The Sea Gull, out of New York, was fishing near Georges Banks when the gale of last night struck her. All night she was battered until her fuel gave out. Shortly after daybreak shp was swept on the shoals south of the Nantucket Shoal Light vessel.

Her SOS, picked up in Boston by the Tropical Radio Corporation, gave her position as "40, point, 47, north, by 68, point, 15, west."

CUBIST 'UNDIES' INTRODUCED BY U. S. COUNTESS

Garish "Charleston" Lingerie Now All the Rage in Paris

By C. F. BERTELLI.

(Copyright, 1925, Boston Evening American.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The cubist chemise is the latest addition to the wardrobe of the up-to-date Parisian woman.

Fantastic designs now adorn the brilliantly colored chiffon which, before being used for undies, goes through a hand-printing process similar to that used in the last century for the famous Victorian chintzes.

While futuristic, geometrical patterns are favored, the impressionist school also supplies several designs, such as morning glories, climbing trellises and Pierrots and Pierrettes in touching love scenes in pastel colors on black background.

The fashion has a strictly American origin, since it is claimed that it was rendered necessary because of the peculiar steps of the Charleston, which, if properly executed, naturally force the dancer to exhibit the knees: thus the novel combination is fashioned pantalettewise, but stops above the knee, which is covered only by a longish flounce, more often than not quite visible below the short skirts.

Created by Yvonne Carette, they were first launched in Paris ballrooms by Countess Dentice di Frasso, the erstwhile Dorothy Taylor, and promptly copied by the smartest women of the younger set.

Similar patterns are also used freely for indoor negligees which mostly take the form of pajamas.

For the first time on record this year's hostesses at tea parties receive guests dressed in pajamas. The latter are generally gorgeous affairs of rich printed satins heavily trimmed with ermine, sables or chinchilla.

'BE YOUR OWN SANTA CLAUS,' NEW ENGLAND GOOD FELLOW SLOGAN

FLOOD ALL CHILDHOOD WITH CHRISTMAS SUNSHINE

THIS is a picture taken in the land of the Midnight Sun, of Earl Kris, Santa Claus' chauffeur, and "Blitzen," Santa's reindeer "wheelhorse." They are on their way to Boston. All the reindeer love to be petted by little boys and girls. Earl Kris and Bobby Mays, the Eskimo boy, will show them on Boston Common.

In thousands of Boston and New England homes doubt exists as to the presence in this world of Old Kris Kringle—Santa Claus. In thousands of New England homes tattered stockings, hung hard by the stove pipes, are continually filled with lumps of coal and what not when Christmas rolls round.

And what little hope there might be that Santa Claus does exist and that Santa Claus with his flock of reindeer each Christmas rides over the housetops stopping to climb down chimneys and leave gifts flits off into the air vanishes.

But this Christmas 'tis the Good Fellow's decree that such shall not be. 'Tis the decree of Good Fellows that these innocents shall not be berefit of faith at the season of gladness. Every man, woman and child in New England has his or her chance of making this a reality—of bringing gladness into the homes of the little kiddies to whom a toy, a doll, a dress or something of the sort will bring infinite joy and happiness for another year at least.

MODEST KINDLINESS.

The Boston Evening American has devised a scheme whereby this spirit of kindliness can be administered without ostentation. This newspaper believes it can make it possible for thousands of men, women and children in New England to know what a real gladsome Christmas tide is.

But those of us who are more fortunate than our fellows must put shoulders to the wheel and give. Give until it hurts, almost, that Santa Claus can invade the homes of Boston and New England's poor.

By this scheme if you live in Roxbury you can care for a case in Roxbury. The same is true if you are in any other New England town.

Hardly more than six weeks remain before Christmas arrives. Already Good Fellow has heard from countless children asking that their pleas be directed to Santa Claus with whom Good Fellow is already in communication.

Now Mr. Businessman you can help and if you are really desirous the Boston Evening American offers you this suggestion. Just write to the Good Fellow Editor of the Boston Evening American setting forth the fact that you'd like to do your bit.

He has thousands of pleading letters on his desk awaiting yours. He'll send you the name of one case, or more if you desire, he'll send you the letter and let you know direct just what some child wants and then you can do the rest.

Should you be too busy to personally attend the matter just ask that obliging stenographer to take care of it. Give her the money and the letter and let her care for the matter.

Good Fellow knows she'll be more than pleased to perform the task. Think the matter over, decide just what you want to do then let Good Fellow know and he'll do the rest. He can give you a case in any vicinity which might be more convenient to you or to those upon whom you call for assistance.

Mr. or Mrs. Householder anywhere in New England. You can do the same thing. Good Fellow has scores of letters in which kiddies ask for articles of wearing apparel, for dollies, for toys, games and books.

BRING SUNSHINE.

The slogan which Good Fellow has adopted for this campaign is "Be Your Own Santa Claus." You can be Santa himself and still make the kiddies believe the jolly old codger with his brand new red suit with white fur trimmings does exist. And through your acts of kindness stockings which hang by stove pipes and chimneys will be filled.

Here are a few letters Good Fellow has received. Read them over, see if you can't help, then remember we have hundreds, yea thousands of others which can't be printed but which can be mailed to every good fellow in New England:

Dear Santa Claus:

SPORTY CAR IS CLEW TO GIRL

whereabouts, but believe she is wandering near Northampton. She may have started by train or have been picked up by autoists.

"Smith College authorities are doing their utmost, assisted by Boy Scouts and citizens. Full description in newspapers. Assistance needed Must act quickly. James H. Corbett."

The search of hospitals, large and small, private and public, was started following one of the first tangible clues in the mystery and which came from W. L. Wilson, Wilder road, Florence.

According to Wilson he saw a girl closely answering the description of the missing young woman being taken from a sporty, yellow painted roadster, into the arched doorways of a private sanitarium in West Suffield.

He declares his suspicious were aroused by the girl and a girl companion. He stopped and watched the proceedings. The occupants of the machine were distinctly different.

One was tall and thin and the other was much shorter. He noted the dresses worn by the two as they entered the doorway of the private hospital.

He says that in a few minutes the shorter of the girls emerged wearing the henna dress, which was much too long for her and ill-fitting in other ways.

He also states that when he was passing the college grounds he saw the same roadster driven into the college grounds by the girl in the ill-fitting dress.

Wilson immediately got into communication with Francis King at the college and an investigation was started at once.

DECLARED MENTALLY ILL.

Alice Corbett disappeared while suffering "mental sickness," President Neilson of Smith told the students in an address during chapel today.

"I feel quite confident in saying that in this case we are dealing with a case of mental sickness with no external cause," he said.

"Her relations with her family, her fellow students and her friends were all excellent. She was in no trouble, scholastic or other kind. She was apparently the victim of a melancholic disturbance in her mind.

"One can see, as one picks up from one place or another information about her condition, that she grasped at this or that particular thing which might, to herself, explain her mood. These things, apprehension about her standing at college and the like, were nothing but attempts to explain the mood.

TO EXPLAIN MOOD.

"The mood, it seems clear, was caused by mental sickness, as I say. I should, therefore, be glad to have your minds set at rest about that. No one with whom she had relations had, as far as can be discovered, any responsibility—anything to blame themselves with in this matter.

eral favorable dividend announcements, including an extra cash payment of $5 on Du Pont and an increase in the annual rate on Kennecott Copper from $3 to $4.

Motors were heavily sold for both accounts. Du Pont broke 16 points after the announcement of the dividend.

Prices developed a rallying tendency during the early afternoon, although call money rates were marked up to 5 per cent.

Oils were well bought. Rails were easier, although the Van Sweringen issues gave a good account of themselves.

Selling pressure was renewed just before "delivery time" with the whole market selling off again.

BOSTON GOLD SEEKER MEETS MRS. SANTA CLAUS IN ALASKA

A radiogram was received today by the Boston Evening American from Mrs. Santa Claus, saying that she had seen Santa off aboard the Steamer Lady Maude, bound for Boston via Seattle, with the best presents Santa has ever manufactured in his toyshop.

Mrs. Santa is quite accustomed by now to having her popular hubby leave her alone every Christmas time, but she doesn't want him gone too long, so she radios:

"Please tell him to be home by New Year's Day."

Just like a wife—but remember, Mrs. Santa Claus is the one to be thanked for getting Santa to start early for Boston, where he is going to greet the kiddies on the Common and prove that he is a real person.

And speaking of Mrs. Santa's kindness, here is a letter from Ichabod R. Tutlittle of Hyde Park, who met Mrs. Claus years ago and is one of the few Bostonians who have ever seen her.

SPLENDID THINGS.

Nov. 11, 1925.

Editor, Boston Evening American,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

You have done a splendid thing for the children of New England. You have made it possible for them to see Santa Claus and hear his voice. And those wonderful little reindeer! Now the children will see them, too!

Many years ago I was a prospecter for gold near Nome, Alaska. Just before Christmas I struck a big pocket of gold nuggets. I was rich! I thought to myself:

"Here is all this gold and no place to spend it. If only I could get back to the United States and give all the children a great Christmas party, with presents and heaping plates of food for everybody."

But, as everyone knows, there are no boats to the United States in the Winter-time. The sea all around Nome is frozen solid. Airplanes had not been invented. I must stay in Alaska until the following Summer—gold and all.

Well, sir, I had a brilliant thought. Santa Claus was due, according to rumor, to leave Icy Cape at 6:00 p. m. Christmas eve. Now, if only I could persuade him to take me along in his sleigh, I would be carried through snow, sky and over the house-tops quick as a wink. I would arrive home in plenty of time to give a great party for the little folks.

I hitched up my fastest dogs and started for Icy Cape. Mile after mile we circled through the snow—faster and faster as six o'clock approached. But like every other Alaskan who had tried, I was unable to find Santa's house and his work-shop. They were cunningly hidden. At half past six I gave up hope and started back for camp.

MET MRS. SANTA.

Suddenly I saw a smart little sleigh coming toward me, drawn by two reindeer with silver bells jingling on their harness. It was a pretty sight. And it was even prettier when I saw that the driver was a pink-cheeked little lady with the friendliest smile you ever saw.

As she stopped her deer she bowed to me and said, "Sir, I suppose you are looking for Santa Claus."

"I am, indeed," I replied.

"He has just left for the United States," she said, still smiling. "I am driving home after seeing him off. I am Mrs. Santa Claus, sir, and I bid you a Merry Christmas."

And with that, she tossed a package into my sled, shook her reins and sped off like a flash. That package, Mr. Editor, contained a pair of big, warm fur gloves. A card was attached, on which she had written:

"You are the good man who wants to give the children a fine Christmas. Had there been room in Santa's sleigh you might have ridden with him. Next year, if you come back, I shall try to arrange it. I wish you a happy, happy Christmas." (Signed)

"Mrs. Santa Claus"

Do you wonder that I believe in Santa Claus and that I know Mrs. Claus is his greatest helper?

Respectfully, sir,
Ichabod R. Tutlittle.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Sale at Christopher Shop for Sweet Charity's Sake Starts Today and Continues Through Wednesday

THAT PORTION OF THE resident smart set devoted to the Christopher Shop for handicapped women and men are sending out a clarion call to everyone asking a record attendance at the Shop, No. 385 Boylston street, the first three days of the present week. Mrs. Horace Morison and the managerial coterie are putting out a wealth of goods.

EVERYTHING IS HANDMADE and of Christmas appeal. And three specialties on hand in great profusion are dress covers, laundry and shoe bags in sets, done in lovely dainty colors to match the decorative motif of milady's chamber. Just the thing for brides and new homes.

AS A SECONDARY attraction, but equally exquisite in workmanship and design, hand woven table runners make insistent appeal to feminine tastes and purses. And of course there's an endless collection—Chinese jewelry all the way from Dr. Bliss's hospital in Wuchang, China—toys, baskets, rugs, nests of tables and such.

PHILANTHROPIC BOSTON knows its Christopher Shop well—the history of the old and famous James March Jackson League just recently amalgamated with the lusty newer growth, the Occupational Hand Crafts under the new "Christopher Shop" title. There's a hundred homebound patients and a workroom up on Parker Hill.

MISS SUSAN G. HILLS at the Workshop welcomes guests and delights in showing the thriving industry. Just as Mesdames George Eddy Warren, M. Irving Mott, Ralph Doane, Harry S. Hill, Wilbur S. Grant, Joel E. Goldthwaite, George S. Parker and others will welcome purchasers at the Shop.

MRS. FRANKLIN Q. BROWN of New York and Dobbs Ferry came over to town for the briefest of stays at the Hotel Somerset to give a lovely and picturesque party for Miss Caroline Freeman Lawrence (her niece) and Miss Ruth Baylies. It was a dinner-dance like festivities of great-grandmother's day, staged at the Somerset.

EVERY ONE BIDDEN voted it very jolly. Everything down to the last detail was Eighteenth Century—gowns of the buds, men's costumes; attendants in periwigs and small clothes, bringing back bygone days when aristocratic colonials d[illegible] waxen floors to the tinkling measures of fiddle and flute in [illegible] ballroom.

MANY BOSTON FAMILIES possess rare assortments of old costumes and attic treasure chests produced many quaint rich frocks for the occasion. Miss Lawrence wore a lovely lustrous salmon-pink taffeta, with the off-the-shoulder line and round full skirt.

HER HOSTESS (Mrs. Brown is an aunt on the maternal side), wore a rare old green brocade of stately sweeping folds. The frock worn by Miss Baylies, daughter of the Walter C. Baylies, was a quaint conception of pink silk garlanded with roses and tied with blue ribbons at one side.

A VISION in lustrous rose pink taffeta, Miss Nancy Olive Morison wore a lovely gown handed down through generations—its snug little bodice with tulle fichu and round full skirt, quaint and becoming as could be, topped with a white wig in approved Colonial style.

MRS. FREDERICK W. Vanderbilt, grande dame of Newport and beloved of the lowly there, once again plays the hostess on Thanksgiving Day for scores of news and messenger boys. Tables for nearly 400 will be set out in Masonic Hall the guest list having total disregard of color, creed and nationality.

MRS. OLIVER AMES, JR., with a distinguished committee, is arranging a series of Thursday morning talks at the Children's Hospital. On November 19 Dr. Byers will speak.

IT'S DONE IN ROYAL fashion to boyish tastes—a plenteous table, girls from the Nina Circle of King's Daughters as waitresses, a minister to offer brief prayer, and an orchestra dispensing what's very new in syncopated music, and the boys themselves singing lustily if not tunefully.

MRS. W. SEWARD WEBB (born Vanderbilt), of New York and Shelburne House, Shelburne Farms, Vt., is staying the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. Cyril Jones (Frederika Vanderbilt Webb), at the latter's Hyde Park establishment. The Jones are entertaining at dinner for Mrs. Webb this evening.

GOTHAM FRIENDS of Mrs. Nathanial F. Emmons, of Hingham, are making her present stay in the Big City one round of festivity. Mrs. Frank Polk gave a tea for Mrs. Emmons at the new Polk domicile in the East Sixties, and others are to be hostesses at luncheons at chic New York restaurants.

FOR JERITZA at the Metropolitan Opera in Tannhauser, Mrs. Emmons was resplendent in gold brocade with corsage of orchids. As honor guest for a theatre party to see the "Green Hat" and sup at Club Mirador she wore rose pink lace and silver with gardenias. Mrs. Emmons returns to town for a number of the bud festivities.

MRS. GEORGE ANDREWS MORIARTY is back in Newport from Boston staying with Miss Fanny Foster in Leroy avenue. Miss Lilias S. S. Moriarty is a guest at the Hotel Puritan, Commonwealth avenue, where Rear Admiral and Mrs. Livingston Hunt of Newport, are living for the Winter.

Milady Shops

Keep a dainty powder puff handy on your handkerchief, girls. It's the latest thing in doo-dabs and quite, quite "ritzy." No fussing, no embarrassment, your puff is now no longer an eyesore but a thing of beauty.

Painted on the "hanky" in colors that will not wash off is the "powder-puff lady." She is holding a dainty basket in her arms, and it is in this basket the tiny puff is intriguingly tucked away.

Only a tiny bit of the downy puff is visible to a stranger's eyes. But it is there and always handy.

These handkerchiefs are excellent for tailored suits, where you can place them neatly in a breast pocket. A Boylston street specialty who knows best what is dear to the hearts of the younger set originated these dainties. The prices are moderate.

Garters should be worn and not seen, but who would want to hide a lovely pair of silken ones encrusted with sparkling rhinestones? Jewels are now the vogue on milady's stocking stops.

None but a Temple place shop, famous for its "fads" would be the first to "show" this novelty.

Keep your dressing table as neat and up to date as you would your nails. And as wet as your thirst. Toilet water put up by a famous Paris house now comes in a model champagne bottle. Of pint size and as clear and golden as old wine are these bottles. The toilet water promises to "intoxicate" your skin and bring the blush to your cheeks and joy to your eyes.

Shawls as beautiful as a queen could wish are now on window display. They come in all the pastel shades.

Greetings and Salutations

CHRISTMAS DAY in the morning. Holly, mistletoe, red ribbon, the rustle of tissue paper, and a tangle of ribbons.

Greetings and salutations on Christmas cards, from friends, acquaintances, and family. Some are formal, some are tender, some are funny, and some very spiritual in tone. Yet each one carries a part of the meaning of the day when the spirit of Good Will is abroad.

Your Christmas cards, too, will be in homes far and near, taking your best wishes to those whom you wish to remember.

We suggest that you order these same cards very soon, so that you may be sure to find just the ones you wish and that there may be ample time to engrave them properly. You will find the cards of great variety and more beautiful than ever before.

At the same time that you choose your cards you may wish to order some monogram playing cards as a gift, or some of the new French and English papers with an illuminated monogram.

GIRL WARNED RHINELANDER HE WAS IN DANGER OF LOSING HER

'I'LL HAVE TO GO AWAY WITH ANOTHER,' SHE WROTE

other letter complaining of Leonard's absence and telling him frankly that he would have to marry her.

"I am not going to remain to be true," she wrote, "because I have had a miserable summer. If you are as mean to remain away long and forget me completely. I love you but you will have to come and marry me."

In March, 1923, she broached again the suggestion that they marry secretly, saying it was the advice of a friend named Kitty. Shortly after that she received her diamond engagement ring from young Rhinelander and wrote him: "Darling, I have won you. Haven't I dear?"

The second of the large batch of missives from Leonard to Alice made its appearance at this point.

BEWAILED HER POVERTY.

It was a telegram thanking her for a ring she had sent him. The first of his messages to her read last week was an invitation to visit him in San Francisco. Today's telegram said:

"Package arrived Saturday. No words can express how pleased I am with the ring. Many, many thanks, letter on way."

Money affairs also made their appearance in letter read today. Alice at times bewailing her poverty. Complaining especially about her inability to take a trip to Europe, she said: "I often wish I was a rich girl."

In another letter written in March 1923, she discusses a plan to buy an automobile but apparently was dissuaded by young Rhinelander.

"I guess you are right about the car question. I won't get one," she wrote. In another letter she asked Leonard to buy a ruby ring for her sister Emily, telling him that the latter had admired a similar ring which he had given her.

COULD "HUG HIM FOREVER."

Once the fervor of her first letters cropped out in a magazine picture contained in one of her letters. The picture showed a couple embracing and underneath was written: "Len, stay with me forever, Alice." In the body of the letter she said: "If you could only hold me again like the picture."

The importance of Leonard becoming of age crops out in another letter in March, 1924, when she wrote:

"When you become your own master, what are you going to do with your Alice? When are you going to take her? I am looking for you more this May as you are going to be your own boss." It was in May of this year that young Rhinelander became of age, their marriage taking place five months later.

Up to date Rhinelander's counsel have read 51 out of 420 letters written to him by his wife. His attorneys have 92 more letters to read.

Later letters revealed that Alice wished to establish an apartment with Leonard and, at the same time, keep their relations secret. She indicates that she realized the objections of young Rhinelander's family to their friendship but added that it could be kept away from them. "If you come home to me now," she wrote, "your father will not have to know where you are."

On August 18, 1922, she said: "I often wish I had a nice little apartment by myself, but I can't afford it because I am not working. If you were here I know we would have one. Write and tell me if you think it would be wise to get one for you and I."

CAN "NEVER FORGET HIM."

Apparently Leonard acquiesced in her suggestion after several months for in March, 1923, she wrote: "I was pleased when I got your letter about the apartment. I am going to start looking for one at once."

Throughout her letters, several of which contained erotic passages, Alice referred to "Eddie," apparently the Edward Holland who was a witness last week, when he denied that he had ever courted her. "I always thought I never could forget Eddie," she said, "but now I never can forget you."

The wife's attorneys have set aside 193 out of about 400 of his letters to her for introduction either when Rhineland is cross-examined or his wife testifies as evidence that Rhinelander was not deceived.

His wife's lawyers have a photograph of Alice Jones, the negro taxicab driver's daughter whom he married, and her black three-year-old niece.

The photograph is said to have been taken by Rhinelander. Also the lawyers say they have a postcard addressed to the black child and signed "Uncle Leonard."

They say the girl received few presents from her wealthy suitor. But they have available as exhibits a cream and sugar set, a photograph of Rhinelander in cowboy costume taken in Arizona, and framed in a gold-plated horseshoe and picture postcards of the Treasury Building in Washington and of the Philadelphia mint.

Robert Rose, a publisher's clerk, has been summoned as a witness for the plaintiff. Rose was mentioned in one of the defendant's letters as her first sweetheart.

DREAMS OF KIP IN LULLABIES

(Photos by International News Reel.)

Begged Kip to Marry Her, or She'd 'Forget Him for Life'

New York, Nov. 16.—More fervent love letters written by Mrs. Kip Rhinelander were read today at the trial of her husband's annulment suit in White Plains Court. The letters follow:

Its not that I do not want to see you.

Leonard, I hope I are not doing too much in asking you. I want to buy Emily a ruby ring like the one like mine.

"WISHED" ON HIS RING.

She has always loved that one. And I was going to ask you, if you could send it, and try to match another one like it for hear. Then I shall return it back to your little finger what I put it on. And made a lovely wish on it, but dearest I shall tell you the wish someday when you and I will be alone together. It cant come to soon. I love you more each day.

As besides now, I am living home, and you see a thing different when you live in and out work, because your money is not steady, as your stationed in life, your much better off than what I am.

But we can't have everything we want. As long as I have my health, I will not worry about any think else.

I wished I were out there with you. But, look, dear, how many times your little girl has been disappointed.

So, good-night, darling, and dream of me again soon. Lots of love. ALICE.

Demands Kip "Marry or Forget Her"

September 12, 1922. Paul Smith. Going home, Sept 15.

Dear Friend,

Feeling very sick but first wanted to drop you a few lines, to let you no, that I have received your telegram, this morning, rather surprised to hear that you are in Seattle Washington, why so close and did not come into N Y. I am heartbroken, over this case, as I hate to be mean, toward you.

But I am going to promise you, I am not going to remain, to be true, like I have been for you. As I have had a very miserable Summer, and I am not going to spend the Winter like it, as I said before, it does not pay.

DEMANDS HE COME BACK.

Get off your mind, about me coming out to Arizona, or any other place, as I never, will.

If you are as mean, as what you are to stay so long from me and now going to remain all Winter. You can GO for good, as I ask for one thing, FORGET me completely. As I will after, forget you and probly that will be easier done, when I go abroad.

I must tell, you TRUTH about how you stand, Leonard, I love you, Leonard, and gotten to love you more and more, but I shall give you fair chance, before we both part. You can come back, some way, and marry, or either you will never see me again, as it's come to this and it shall after be kepted still for your part.

But if you are not going, to be willing, I am very glad to get a nice long letter, for a answer saying yes, but if I dont, do not worry why I do not write. As I will NEVER write another letter, to you soay.

But this letter is written plain and its up to you to fight, for me, thats if you want me, as I will take no notice of this, under age business, but I will go abroad, and stay a good, full six months, and will not remain, with Mrs. Alderson.

WILL KEEP "DIED SECRET."

She feels very sorry, that this is happened and she thinks, the world of me, but she, advised me, to get married, and keep it a died secret, just between us both, then she said if we did that, why the both us could remain being true to each other, and besides we will, no that each one belongs, to each other and I think she is perfectly right. And I am going, to take her advice as she is married and always has given me, good advice.

I no that you are thinking I am terrible. But I feel terrible on Sept. 12, when I received that letter, saying you ar going to remain away from N. Y. And year, that day 12th I was introduced to you, and how I stuck, and fought, for your part, which I knew nothing about you at all, and to think I got such a heart broken letter.

But I shall never forget this and as sick, as I was, and I was only in the morning, when I was in bed, holding your picture in hand saying, A year today my darling, I kissed, your warm sweet lips and to receive such a letter.

Well Len, I shake hands, good-by—and I am afraid, this will be my LAST letter. Hope you luck and safe trip—and keep in best of health, and hope you have a happy future life, th eone your dad's want you to have and be happy.

ALICE.

PUT A NEW HEART INTO YOUR KITCHEN

Priscilla Price tells me that Christmas shopping has started up earlier than ever this year and I want to suggest to my Club members and readers that they take time from these interesting expeditions to step into one of the sixteen offices of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and take a good, long look at the new Smoothtop gas ranges. The range that offers a new delight in cooking and a new ease in food preparation and a new economy in gas. A range, in short, that will put a new heart in your kitchen.

You truly have to see all the innovations that the new Smoothtop has in order to appreciate it. For instance, the new Speed Burner that works 25 per cent. faster than the old type and the solid new top cooking surface which keeps hot all over, letting one burner do the work of two or three. You will be especially interested in the liberal allowance that the Gas Company offers for your old range and the easy Club terms.

No doubt you have always wanted better, quicker and easier cooking and this is just what the new Smoothtop will bring you. Every square inch is a cooking surface with no cold spots, so a whole meal can be prepared at once with a tremendous saving in gas. Of course the oven is supplied with an accurate heat control which completely frees you from any tedious supervision of the heat.

If you do drop in to see this kitchen marvel, I am sure that mentioning you are a Club member will insure for you special attention.

WHEN THE GOOSE HANGS HIGH

Thanksgiving — when the goose hangs high, and plans are busily being made for the season's feast of feasts, when your heart sort of expands and you invite all the folks to come early for dinner and you forget for the moment just how fussy and critical poor old Aunt Annie is, and fastidious Uncle Will, inclined perhaps to survey the family group with a censorious eye.

Folks are folks, to be cherished for the family ties that bind us more or less closely together, but it's a wise housewife who appreciates human frailties, so to speak, and sees to it that the household is about right before the first guests arrive. It's what makes Thanksgiving a day of fun with everything spick and span ready for the festivities.

Club members will find, I am sure, that a can of Noxon Cleaner Polish will be of the greatest assistance in getting the home ready. It's good for so many things because, unlike most polishes, it's equally effective on all metals, glass and porcelain. In my own home I formerly had three separate cans of polish, but today I find a 25c can of Noxon does better and quicker work and it surely does keep things bright much longer than other polishes. I have tried to temper my enthusiasm in giving Club members the benefit of my research work, but I must say to all those who number Aunt Annies and Uncle Wills in the family gathering that Noxon will make silver ware and cut glass shine in harmonious splendor hitherto unknown, and the whole family chorus "What a wonderful Thanksgiving."

CANNED GOODS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

During National Canning Week, which is with us now, the housewife's fancy lightly turns to the excellent bargains in all sorts of canned goods—especially in case lots—which are being offered by our local grocers.

Several of our Club members have written me asking if I really felt that canned goods have any place in a child's diet.

Now in selecting the right foods for your little folks two important items should be given consideration: The digestibility of the food and its perfect sterilization. The best cooked foods are usually the most digestible and few are better cooked than products put up in cans, and of course the high temperature attained in the canneries destroys all harmful organisms. These scientifically processed foods contain all the elements necessary for the human system and will help you to lend variety to your children's diet.

Canned peaches, canned grapefruit, canned applesauce and seedless figs are just a few of the excellent canned products that are good for little Johnny and wee Mary. The fruit juices may be strained from the canned fruit and made into a palatable drink for the children or used as a sauce with simple cornstarch or custard puddings.

Many nourishing broths, stews, etc., come in small sized cans, just enough for a child's meal with no waste, and even excellent creamed potatoes are waiting for you on the store shelves in their tin jackets.

THAT BED TIME LUNCH

I wonder if you are one of the army of people who about 10:30 p. m. get inside information from Friend Stomach that a small amount of provisions would be welcome to tide over until morning. All too often, perhaps, you have indulged this evening appetite not wisely but too well. Result, an uneasy night and the famous brown taste next day.

Many of our wiser sisters and brethren, however, have learned that a cup of piping hot cocoa with perhaps a couple of saltines will satisfy the hunger signals, and at the same time encourage Friend Morpheus rather than shoo him away.

Lowney's Dutch Processed Cocoa or the Breakfast Variety makes one of the very best of these bed-time beverages. Personally I am especially fond of the Dutch cocoa. It seems to have such a fine natural chocolate flavor, and is so smooth and so easy to make. No boiling is required, you know. Just mix a teaspoon of sugar and ½ teaspoon of Lowney's Dutch Cocoa and fill the cup with scalding hot milk or half milk and half hot water and you have a rich, nourishing drink, a bed-time beverage that is hard to improve upon.

The chill Fall winds and rains need hold no terrors, either, if you fortify your system against chills with a big, hot cup of this pure, delicious cocoa as soon as possible after exposure. Do include Lowney's in your next grocery order, if it is not already on your list.

IF you like Cocoa

Then you'll like Lowney's best.

For Lowney's shows you how cocoa ought to taste.

Your choice:
Lowney's Cocoa (Regular) ⅛ and 1-5 lb. tins.
Lowney's Dutch Cocoa. ⅛ and ¼ lb. tins.

NEW PRIZES IN MARTHA LEE CONTEST

Every day that a membership coupon for the WNAC American Women's Club appears in this paper an avalanche of new members come in the next mail which surely indicates that there are literally thousands of New England housewives who are not yet enrolled in this helpful Club of no dues, and many benefits, who would be glad to, if it was brought to their attention, and so since this is true, and it is equally true that everyone of our 21,641 members is tremendously proud because ours is the largest Club of women in New England I have decided to make our new Martha Lee Prize contest a drive for increased membership in our organization.

I know that with very little effort each member can secure 20—50—possibly several hundred new members since all that it is necessary for anyone to do to join, is to personally sign the membership card which appears on the magazine page each Monday and Saturday.

WONDERFUL PRIZES.

Two wonderful major prizes are offered in this contest to the two members sending in the largest number of signed application coupons.

One of these major prizes is one of the famous Hoosier beauty kitchen cabinets in French gray and blue enamel. This is donated by the Arthur McArthur Company, No. 11a Washington St., Boston. No words of mine are necessary to tell you what a cabinet of this kind means to the housewife, how many hours of time and what heaps of energy it will save the happy winner.

The other major prize is a 5-tube A. C. Dayton Radio Set, donated by the A. C. Electrical Mfg. Company of Dayton, Ohio. Best of all, the set is completely equipped with a Splitdorf loud speaker, a Yale A battery, Eveready B batteries, and 5 Cunningham tubes. Do drop into our Club room between now and the closing of the contest, December 20th, and listen to this wonder-set which is working merrily away without ground or antenna.

Where could we find two more desirable prizes so well worth the pleasant effort necessary to win them?

BEAUTY AND UTILITY.

The third prize is a beautiful Gruen wrist watch, in a 14 karat white gold case, 15 jewel movement, donated by Reagan, Kipp & Co., of Boston. Everyone knows the reputation which Gruen watches have established for reliability combined with beauty. This is a watch that any woman will be proud to own, and is valued at $35.00.

The fourth prize will be equally dear to the housewife, a solid mahogany tea wagon in the new brown finish with removable glass tray, rubber tired wheels and handle. A beauty, valued at $30.00, donated by Ferdinand's, the well-known Blue Store of Roxbury.

The fifth prize consists of 6 real Wedgewood place-plates of English bone china, and also 6 of the newest clear glass soup plates, also used for melons or oysters. Even the home table boasts its place-plates nowadays, and the clear glass allows the full beauty of the exquisite plates to show through. This prize is donated by the Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Co. of Boston.

The sixth prize is a Complete Bathroom equipment in the splendid Sno-Wite Enamel Ware, donated by the Standard Plate Glass Co. of Boston. It consists of a plate glass shelf, plate glass mirror, Sno-Wite tooth brush holder, tumbler holder and soap dish. I am sure all of you are familiar with the super-quality of this beautiful ware, which will last the fortunate winner a lifetime. Value, $25.00.

COMBINATION GIFTS.

The next 25 prizes are combination gifts of the world-famous O'Cedar products. The seventh prize consists of a big O'Cedar polish mop, dusting mop, floor duster, wall duster, hand duster, can wax, dust cloth and a gallon of O'Cedar polish.

Eighth prize, 2 big mops, floor duster, wall duster, hand duster, 1 lb. O'Cedar wax, 1 dust cloth and one-half gallon O'Cedar polish.

The ninth prize, 2 O'Cedar mops, wall duster, hand duster, 1 lb. wax, dust cloth and one-half gallon O'Cedar polish.

The tenth prize is composed of 2 O'Cedar mops, hand duster, floor duster, wall duster, dust cloth, and one-half gallon polish.

The eleventh prize, 2 O'Cedar mops, wall duster, dust cloth, 1 lb. wax, 1 quart polish.

The twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth and twenty-first prizes are each 2 O'Cedar mops, wall mop, dust cloth and 1 quart polish.

The twenty-second, twenty-third, twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth, twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, thirtieth, thirty-first prizes are each composed of 2 O'Cedar mops, dust cloth, hand duster and 1 quart polish.

All useful, worth-while prizes that will delight the housewife.

The thirty-second, thirty-third and thirty-fourth prize are three salesman's boxes of the Pure Slade's products, donated by the D. & L. Slade Company of Boston. Each Salesman's box contains one package each of allspice, cinnamon, ginger, cloves, lemon extract, tapioca, mustard, cream of tartar, vanilla extract, nutmeg, black pepper, red pepper, seasonings, baking soda and baking powder. Truly a prize worth having.

The thirty-fifth, thirty-sixth, thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth, thirty-ninth, fortieth, forty-first, forty-second, forty-third, and forty-fourth prizes are ten spice shelves, also donated by the D. & L. Slade Company of Boston, and each composed of a package of allspice, cinnamon, ginger, cloves and nutmeg.

I am sure that you will think this is the finest list of prizes we have ever offered that you will be anxious to get busy right away in urging every single one of your friends and acquaintances to fill out the membership coupon for you to send in.

The only conditions of this contest are that in sending in the coupons you give in full your name, address and membership number in the WNAC American Women's Club and be sure that these coupons are signed personally by the members-to-be.

If you are not already a member and wish to enter in this interesting contest, fill in the coupon which you will find in the magazine page on Monday and Saturday and rush it in to Martha Lee.

(Watch for the winners of the previous contest which will appear in Tuesday's Boston Evening American.)

PEGGY'S LAST MARITAL TIE A FOOZLE

Paris, Nov. 16.—Pretty Peggy Joyce's fifth matrimonial try has foozled. Before the news that her counsel had filed the papers against Count Gosta Morner of De Moreland, charging him with non-support and desertion, Peggy was aboard the Mauretania and had sailed away for the United States.

Count Morner and Peggy were wed in Atlantic City in June, 1924.

Dudley Field Malone, it is reported, has been retained by Peggy to start divorce proceedings. The New York lawyer went secretly on the same ship when she departed for Paris to establish her legal residence.

Count Morner accompanied his wife to the ship, the leave-taking being such that her intentions were not revealed.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, or bronchial asthma.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

'Praying Cop' Finds Moral Support in Adversity

A Girl's Soul Stirs and She Wonders Why; Going Out Into the World to Learn of Love

NANCY HAWTHORNE, beautiful and 18, lives with her father in a country village. She lacks the knowledge of city girls of her age. Curly, a country boy she befriends, meets her on the hilltop at night. What happens opens her eyes. She tells her father and they discuss things he believes Nancy should know. She is no longer a little girl.

SHARKEY AND MALONEY TO BATTLE NOV. 30

N. E. HEAVY TITLE AT STAKE IN BIG CHARITY GO

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY against Jim Maloney!

With the New England heavyweight championship at stake!

Jack Conway

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk A. A. announces he has signed this famous pair of punchers for a show to be staged at Mechanics Building on Monday evening, November 30.

The club's profit will be donated to the Santa Claus Fund of the Boston Evening American, New England's greatest charity.

It is the banner boxing match of the season. It is one that every club in Boston has been trying to arrange since Sharkey and Maloney engaged in their celebrated battle at Braves Field last June. On that occasion, Sharkey won on a foul in nine rounds after the most spectacular heavyweight tussle ever staged in New England.

Maloney and Sharkey have been secretly training for a week in anticipation of their managers signing for the championship contest.

FILLED with the spirit of Christmas, Maloney and Sharkey at the last minute both waived their claims to guarantees. Matchmaker Goodwin was prepared to bid as high as $7500 for the services of each boxer, but when he informed Maloney and Sharkey that the club's profit would be donated to the Santa Claus Fund of the Boston Evening American, the famous heavyweights at once showed the kind of stuff they are made of by refusing to accept any guarantee.

"I'll fight on a straight percentage basis," said Sharkey.

"So will I," shot back Maloney. "Guess a couple of big fellows like us should be willing to do something to help the youngsters who will be looking for Santa Claus at Christmas time."

And so the [illegible] about a $7500 guarantee to each boxer was stricken from the contracts and each boxer accepted a percentage privilege.

The spirit of Santa Claus filled the room as the boxers signed. The [illegible] beamed as the boxers and their managers forgot guarantees and turned in to do their bit for the children of New England.

NOBODY can ever tell the writer that the boxing fraternity is not the most generous group in our community when it comes to helping along a worthy charity.

From Boxing Commissioners Foote, Bradley and Lane down to the most humble preliminary boy, everybody has always responded for every worthy charity. The Boston Evening American's Santa Claus Fund has always received particular favor. It has always been given its chief assistance from the big hearted boxing fraternity.

And this year the fund will receive another great boom with the Suffolk Club donating the profits of the Maloney-Sharkey mill to this wonderful charity.

All aboard for the Sharkey-Maloney bout!

Just two weeks away.

THE international amateur boxing show at Mechanics Building Friday night under the direction of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will give the fans a big kick this week. [illegible] has secured the best of the [illegible] boxers who will be [illegible] against the ones of the Pittsburgh and Boston [illegible] here.

Besides the international tussles there will also be contests in open classes. This will give [illegible] ring heroes an opportunity to show their stuff.

Advance interest indicates a capacity crowd as well as the banner boxing show of the season.

Rare Turkish tobaccos give distinction to Chesterfield's blend

Drawing from a photograph by our Mr. Gary, showing the loading of Turkish tobacco aboard lighters to be transferred to the ocean liner in midstream. The tobacco is picked, leaf by leaf, and tightly packed in burlap bags weighing from fifty to a hundred pounds each.

For Chesterfields,
the best Turkish tobacco
—and nothing but the best!

Where does Chesterfield get its spicy tang, its delicate piquancy of taste and aroma? From costly Turkish tobaccos, world-famous for their distinctive character, their sheer excellence of quality.

And how does Chesterfield get its mellow fullness and its satin-smoothness? From the way this fine Turkish is blended with the choice [illegible] Domestic leaf; carefully, [illegible], in that can't-be-copied Chesterfield way that brings out the hidden flavors in each type of leaf.

It [illegible] end of skill and patient experiment to get this blend right. Was it worth it? Just smoke a Chesterfield and let the good tobaccos speak for themselves!

Crimson Coaches Work Frantically to Whip Team Into Shape

By NICK FLATLEY

Harvard has a real chance against Yale.

That's the opinion of the coaches and football experts in general, who watched the Crimson come back to life and beat Brown, while the startling tidings were coming in from the Blue Bowl.

If the Harvard team can show anything like last week's improvement in the next five-day stretch the best the Bulldog has to offer may not avail at the Stadium.

Yale has a powerful, sturdy football team, a relentless sort of machine that in straight, old-fashioned football would hold its own with anybody. But it isn't the flexible model that the new game needs. Princeton proved that, beyond all doubt.

Somebody has said that Yale is [illegible] The Tiger result would seem to show that the observer was [illegible] on the proper [illegible] Bill Roper figured the Yale [illegible] perfectly used a [illegible] of deception rather than straight-out trickery, and hoisted Princeton to the top of the Big Three heap. Harvard will try to steal a page from the Roper book.

PLAYING SECRETS OF Famous Football Stars

Article No. 19—Told by HAROLD GRIFFEN, Centre—Iowa

To ED. THORP, Famous Player, Coach and Referee

THE centre is a very important cog in the football machine. He is the one who must put the ball in play, and a single poor pass may result in the loss of the game.

The present-day type of football places increased responsibilities upon the pivot man. Jones Fears for Morale of His Yale Team

New Haven, Nov. 16 (A.P.)—A local scarcity of tickets for the Yale football game at Harvard next Saturday has followed the reversal of form and defeat of the Bulldog by Princeton. Last week the ticket situation was regarded as easy; today it was "tight" with an increasing number of persons clamoring for a chance to get a pasteboard.

EAGLE ELEVEN IS SHOWING IMPROVEMENT

By BILL CONSODINE.

The showing of the Boston College eleven in its defeat Saturday afternoon at the hands of the West Virginia Wesleyan team was one that augurs well for the Purple caravan with its double team of Four Horsemen when the latter hits the Hub a week from next Saurday.

The Eagles showing was a greatly improved one, individually as well as collectively. The line for the first time this Fall showed that it could do the work that it was supposed to do and this was not because of any inferiority in the Bob Cat frontier. Boston won't face many tougher lines that the West Virginia Wesleyan eleven had.

The charging of the line was good as a unit and the work of the individuals was as good as the entire [illegible] Dick Hurd at one tackle position, Warren McGuirk at the other and Earl Clinton at centre were the stars of the Boston College line.

On the defense the Boston College backfield was another story. Only Tom Smith did any work. It wasn't so much that the other backs did not do any work as that they did not know what to do on the forward pass that the visitors had, the Boston College quarter was lost. B. C. needs to get a forward passing defense and it has two weeks to get it.

I hope to tell you!

PRINCE ALBERT is the greatest little trouble-shooter you could pal around with. It smooths out your smoke-wrinkles toot-sweet. It's got everything you ever wished for in a real, honest-to-Pete smoke . . . and nothing else except! Clamp on the ear-phones and get this message of jimmy-pipe joy.

No matter what your previous experience has been in trying to smoke a pipe, forget it. Write it on the ice! You can smoke a pipe if it's packed with P. A. Yes, sir! For a fact, they'd have to sue you to get that jimmy-pipe away from you, once you give P. A. a work-out.

Cool and sweet and fragrant, P. A. puts a padlock on pipe-worries and throws away the key. Can't bite your tongue or parch your throat. The Prince Albert process fixes that. Just downright, deep-rooted contentment—morning till midnight.

Quality without a doubt. And quantity too. You get more for your money both ways when you smoke P. A. There are TWO full ounces in every tin. (Look at the U. S. revenue stamp.) Get going! Steer straight for the store where they hand out such happiness in tidy red tins. It'll be P. A. for yours after that.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half pound tin humidors, and pound crystal glass humidors with sponge moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

DAILY SHORT STORY

ONLY EVELYN

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

[illegible] a reckless thing for Evie to [illegible] ... honor when [illegible] a man pre-[illegible]

In Sole Charge

[illegible] from [illegible] And Mr. M[illegible] New York [illegible] of the [illegible]

Evie's designs became easier of exe[illegible] when Auntie Con went to Winston Salem for a visit and left her niece in sole control of the Whitney domain.

Evie had no intention of staying there. The directory told her that Edmund Muir, broker, stayed at the [illegible] ... Mrs. Grisdale [illegible]

Did Mrs. Grisdale know Mr. Muir? [illegible] Yes. He spent most of his evenings in his apartments down the corridor. She [illegible] him minutely, admiringly. [illegible] ... with Mr. Muir [illegible] him to a nicety.

Studying Her

Though he seemed to [illegible] a newspaper, she knew he was studying her from saucy green [illegible] to little suede shoe.

He smiled divinely when she passed in front of him into the hallway and walked carefully ahead of him to Mrs. Grisdale's door.

"Dead easy!" she said when the door was shut behind her. "I've got him going already."

She begged Mrs. Grisdale to engineer a meeting right away.

He played into her hands. He came to call on her hostess on the pretext of returning a book. And Mr. Edmund Muir was presented to Miss Frances Gillen.

"It's a shame," said Mrs. Grisdale, "but I have to leave Frances alone the first night of her visit. I just have to go to a club meeting which would surely kill the poor child."

That was Mr. Muir's cue. Boldly he rose to it and well. He was more than willing; he was eager.

Evie hugged herself. It was such fun!

They went to the theatre, she and Mr. Muir; and Miss Frances Gillen exercised all the vamping power she possessed. It would have conquered Sampson even after his blindness and disillusionment.

Mr. Muir was charmed. He was so attentive to her that she began to think the victory had been too easy. But perhaps his regard was just fatherly or—well, she would put it to the test.

Coming home in a taxi, she cuddled quite close to him appealingly, temptingly, with all the seductiveness that was hers.

No response.

He Yawned.

"Wood!" she said to herself, admiring him. "He's awfully good looking."

She rested her head on his shoulder.

Mr. Muir yawned.

"You're wonderful!" [illegible] Evie and took his hand confidently.

"Did you like the play?" He was maddeningly cool. "Miss Gillen . . . Frances?"

"Yes," sighed Evie contentedly, still holding his hand.

Mr. Muir did not kiss her good-night, but it wasn't her fault.

In his room he leaned weakly against the door.

Into the [illegible] entered then a [illegible] he [illegible] laughed with delight. "I can't stand that very long. I'm only human. But. . . . I'll have to isolate myself or keep her in the crowd . . . . little fiend!"

Mr. Muir didn't know the half of it. Evie was fast beginning to enjoy the fun.

The next evening when he had finished his dinner and was reading the paper as was his wont, a small cyclone burst in upon him.

He greeted Miss Gillen timidly and looked to see if his man was handy. He felt the need of protection.

He Turned Away

Evie pushed him into his chair, seated herself on its arm and draped her own lovingly about his neck.

"Oh, Mr. Muir . . . Edmund!" she murmured most ravishingly in a near-to-death tone.

He tried to read the news of France's war-debt problems.

"France is slow paying? Isn't she?"

Evie smoothed his hair.

"Edmund, won't you love me a little, please?"

He half raised his lips to hers; she bent quickly for his surrender; then with a supreme effort he turned away.

"I . . . you see . . . well, I do like you very much, Frances; but you don't really love me. Now do you?"

"Do I not?" asked Evie fervently and pressed her cheek against his.

Mr. Muir arose, nearly upsetting her.

"Here's the book you came after, Frances. Oh yes, you did! Here it is, now. You must come again. You really must."

"I shall," said Evie dramatically as he turned her gently towards the door. "I can't stay away from you. Is it any use my loving you?"

"Why, of course you must love me. Good night."

"Superman!" sighed Evie with profound admiration when she had returned to Mrs. Grisdale. "I think I've tried him enough. He's awfully strong."

Alone, Mr. Muir discarded his paper and collapsed into his chair. His face told of a great struggle within. His lips twitched, he smiled, he laughed long.

Evie's visit came to its finish with the return of Auntie Con. Mr. Muir did not kiss her goodby. But she kissed him. He didn't dodge quick enough.

A month later the madcap was back in Denver. So was Mr. Muir.

The first night of his visit as he sat with Teddie, Evelyn went past the door like a streak.

'Only Evelyn'" repeated Mr. Muir "I'd love to meet her."

Evelyn entered a few minutes after he had expressed his wish.

"From New York?" he said. Evie admired his coolness. He was a perfect stranger. They talked for a long while.

Unique Rings

"It is strange we never met in the big city—or is it?" he asked. "If I had seen you I should have known at once who you were by that triple-emerald ring you wear. Ted told me you had one exactly like hers. And I could recognize you by means of it for the two rings are a unique pair."

Evie said not a word. Instead she glared at the emeralds.

"Yet I did meet a girl," he continued, addressing Ted but watching her sister covertly, "a girl who had a ring very similar. I saw it in the elevator of the Toronto where I stay. I met the girl afterward. She was Miss——Oh, I can't recall the name. I'm sure it was not her own anyway. She was an actress. They usually take a false one."

"And I thought he was a superman," said Evie disgustedly when she had made her escape. "He was goofing me all the time."

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.,

YOU may think that headline a very peculiar question, and, in a certain sense, it is peculiar.

"Of course I see what I see," will probably be your rather positive answer.

Do you know that one of the greatest problems of science has been to determine whether the scientist actually sees what he thinks he sees?

It is to answer this question in detail that magnifying glasses, microscopes, telescopes, spectroscopes and many other kinds of scopes have been devised and are in daily use.

It is to answer this question that consultations are held, chemical analyses are made, tests are applied.

Of course, many of these devices and methods are employed to see things that are not seeable by the naked eye.

But there are many things that are [illegible] to the unaided eye that we think we see but that we actually fail to see with anything like accuracy.

It is known that lawyers feel comparatively safe in their cases of defence when they can get a number of eye witnesses to the alleged offence, [illegible] that they will succeed in [illegible] each other on important points to the confusion of the prosecution.

A part of this variation is due no doubt, to the different positions of the spectators with respect to what was going on. It is known however, that the chief source of confusion is in defective powers of observation. There are comparatively few people who see objects in anything more than outlined, if we except the woman who seriously analyzes the costume of her rival. She can see the ultimate details at a first but most comprehensive glance.

The powers of observation are best developed by looking at an object, registering its dominant characteristics then looking at its important details and voluntarily registering them in turn upon the consciousness.

It is to facilitate habits of observation such as this that exercises in free-hand drawing are of extreme value. If the drawings are supplemented by exercises in coloring, by pigments in either oil or water, their value in developing the powers of observation will be greatly enhanced.

BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"I'LL simply have to set a trap for that fox," said the Scotchman at whose house we were spending a few days up in the Highlands of Scotland.

"He's bad, is he?" I asked, hoping that I might be able to do something to prevent catching the poor fox.

"Yes," said the farmer. "He eats up all of my fowls and has destroyed some of my best hares."

At the mention of hares, Bunny shuddered and looked so frightened that I was really worried about him.

We were up bright and early next morning and the first thing after breakfast our host said:

"Let's go out and see what's in the trap."

We crossed a moor and entered a wood which bordered on the farm. The Scotchman led the way. We followed him into the forest and over to a clump of bushes.

Just as we reached the trap Bobby said:

"Look—look up in that tree-top. Isn't that an eagle?"

"A fine golden eagle," said the farmer, shading his eyes and looking up at the great bird. "He's got something in his mouth, too. Can you see what it is, Bobby?"

"Why it looks like a rat," exclaimed Bobby.

"Wonder what he's going to do with it?" I asked as the great bird left the tree-top and hovered over our heads.

"Maybe he's taking it home to his family for lunch," suggested Bobby.

We moved on to the trap now and instead of finding something with four feet in it, there was something with two feet and two wings.

"The eagle couldn't have gotten down out of the tree without our seeing it," cried Bobby, "but it is exactly like it, isn't it?"

The eagles were identical—the one in the tree-top with the dead rat in his beak and the one which was caught in the trap intended for the fox.

"This is a strange state of affairs," declared the Scotchman. "I thought I had caught a fox and here is an eagle in the trap. They don't like the same food."

"You're going to let him loose, aren't you?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said the farmer, leaning down to open the trap but he had to keep his head away for fear of the eagle snapping at his eyes.

The trap unfastened, the frightened eagle flew up straight in the air and as we watched him soaring away in the sky the eagle in the tree-top spread his wings and joined him. The two beautiful birds floated away into the heavens like two disappearing aeroplanes.

"Funny—that rat," mused Bobby.

"Not at all," said Bunny. "Eagles are very loyal. That fellow in the tree knew his friend was in trouble so he was just bringing him a light lunch. Glad it wasn't one of my folks."

KLAN DRAGON GETS SENTENCE FOR LIFE

Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 16 (A.P.)—David C. Stephenson, Klan Dragon

DX Conditions Last Night

By "THE DOCTOR."

Conditions were poor for long distance, but excellent for local reception. The reception from WNAC and WEEI was as clear as anyone could ask for.

In attempting to bring in outside stations I even found difficulty in picking up KDKA and WGY, who ordinarily give me good volume.

The static was quite heavy, and the air seemed "dead."

Story of a Girl Who Goes Out Into the World to Learn of Love

dear, I've not had three English beaux for nothing—to say nothing of a brother who's at Oxford now. His name's Lloyd and he's my twin."

"Is he a Rhodes Scholar?" asked Nancy.

"No, he's an Anglophile, and that's worse." Cornelia laughed.

"He and I roamed around in England last Summer for three months and it was then that I made the discovery that being unconventional with Englishmen is like dragging them out of a prison from which they are only too glad to escape. You must meet Lloyd some day. He is really worth while, I think.—Now you wouldn't ever have had the nerve to come up and talk to me, but aren't you honestly glad I had? Confess!"

"Yes," said Nancy. "Awfully glad!"

"Then that settles it! That 'awfully' is the nearest you'll ever get to telling me how beautiful I am and how crazy you are about me."

Nancy burst out laughing. "I think you're priceless!—When do we go and look for our studio?"

Cornelia jumped up. "Right this minute!—But wait. There's just one thing. Didn't I tell you my name?" Nancy nodded.

Cornelia waited. Then, after a pause, she linked her arm through Nancy's. "My! but you're a muttonhead. My name's for use, not to remember me by!"

Nancy smiled. "All right, old thing," she said.

Jim put down his book and kicked the beech logs into a reluctant flame. Then he went to his desk and opened a drawer. He pulled out a bundle of letters and came and sat down again. They were numbered by him. They all began and ended the same way, "Darling Dad . . . Your loving Nancy."

Once more he began to reread them, skipping the less significant bits and pausing anew at the touches which were characteristic of her, the jerky breathless comments of excitement of one who, having long stagnated in a backwater, was now in the swirl and rush of the main stream.

HE SMILED

He smiled now at the agony of doubt and self-questioning he had gone through at this paragraph in her first letter. "I hope I'm not really a coward, Dad. When I arrived last night and eventually got to my room, I was too frightened to go down again, even to eat. I went to bed and cried myself to sleep. I don't feel quite sure that I've got over it this morning! It seems impossible that unfamiliarity with a place can make such a difference. Suppose we took one of these people off the streets of Rome and dumped him in the woods near the hill alone at night. Would he be frightened too? I believe so. Anyway, it's that idea which has stirred me to pull myself together."

A week later, still in Rome, "I forgot to tell you that I caught sight of Curly as the train was pulling out of Wendlesbury Junction. Did you see him? He was in khaki with a quiff of hair curling up from under his cap; and although he was still slouching like a field worker and looked as awkward as if he were masquerading as a soldier, yet there was already a change in him. He looked more alert, as though his curiosity had been aroused. I think he has begun to reach out."

Jim stopped at that last sentence. "Good for you, old lady," he murmured. "Damned good! There's a whole philosophy in that line. Furthermore, it shows that she'd got over her funk and was back in her stride, thank God!"

The clock struck midnight. Jim Hawthorne didn't hear it. He was with Nancy as she progressed from Rome to Florence and across to Venice, a progression not only of body but of mind. He chuckled at her account of little adventures with cab drivers, adventures in language, with guides and hotel people and tourists whose trail crossed hers momentarily. He nodded thoughtfully at the way she put down in words the places that she had sketched. It was evident that she had the gift of real observation. It showed in a variety of detail. It showed in her summings up of people and types, German as well as Italian.

JOYOUSLY PATHETIC

Curly was not the only one who was reaching out. Jim exulted that the keynote of her letters was growth. She had found her feet in Italy, proved it in Germany, and now, in France, in the last letter but one, showed an exhilaration in her narration of adventure, an access of poise, a sense of cocksureness that were almost as joyously pathetic to Jim as the sight of a young swallow screaming in triumph on the edge of his nest after a successful, though brief, first flight.

"What do you think happened to me today, Dad?" she wrote. "You couldn't ever guess.—A man accosted me in the street! It's the first time anything like that ever happened to me and I was just as cool and ready—outwardly, at least—as if it had happened a hundred times. I was looking in at a shop window in the Rue de la Paix, absolutely absorbed by a ducky little vanity box in gold and platinum, when all of a sudden a quiet voice said in my ear, in fairly good English, 'Would you like it?' I looked up and there was a man in a frock coat and a tall hat, leering at me. I was petrified! And then he said, 'Let us go in and buy it. Then perhaps we might go and have a bite to eat at the Ritz?' He raised his eyebrows and touched his neat little moustache. Then I woke up. I looked him up and down and said icily, 'I don't usually lunch with men who try on a pair of shoes for me.' Don't you think that was pretty neat, Dad? You should have seen how it worked on the man. He reminded me of one of those dying pigs that they sell in the Strand for a penny, with the same look of surprise on his face. Without another word he slunk off, crossed the street and disappeared in the traffic. Believe me, Dad, I walked on towards the Opera, feeling as if I had Paris in the hollow of my hand!"

Jim glanced at a portrait of her. "It's unimaginable! The same [illegible] that [illegible] the country lout—and now a Parisian waster—that kid!" The last letter was in his hand. He read it carefully. "Evans?—Evans?"—I wonder if she's any relation of the banking man? Vaguely I seem to remember some yarn of a daughter of his eloping with some French aristocrat or something.—This girl of Nancy's must be another daughter. From the way she picked Nancy up and made the studio idea an accomplished fact, I should judge that she's one of those millionaire children whose life is passed in the gratification of every desire—never known control either external or internal—good-hearted, perhaps, but a pronounced egocentric — not much dissatisfied as unsatisfied, liable to go off on any tangent—owns the world and everything in it, especially men.—H'm! If I were her father, I should be a worried man.—Nancy'll fall under her spell at first, just because of the driving force of her. Later, when that wears off a little, she'll begin to analyze and see through her.—Think it's all right. Might be wise, however, to drop Nancy a hint. She's shooting such a par performance I'd hate to see her land in some unnecessary bunker." He rose and knocked out his pipe. Carefully he gathered the letters, arranging them in order, put them back in the drawer and locked it.

He glanced towards the side table. "Damn it, that woman's forgotten the drinks again!" With a touch of impatience, he pushed open the door to the kitchen.

MAKING A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"WHAT are you gazing out into [illegible] for?" demanded [illegible].

It [illegible] me. I [illegible] see [illegible] just stepping into the room from the little side porch. His face wore an odd, puzzled look.

"[illegible] a dryad or something—queer and elfin?" he asked.

"It must have been the Arlette!" flitted through my mind. But aloud I said:

"I see piping hot lamb chops, broiled to a turn. And you know how muttony and tallowy they taste when they get cold."

"All right, let's eat," Jim answered.

But as he sat down I realized that his mind was not on lamb chops and that the difficult situation of half an hour before was not disposed of, but merely postponed.

"I'll know what to say when the time comes," I assured myself.

But would I? A crisis was approaching, of that I was sure. I was equally certain that I did not know how to meet it.

"The only reason I didn't tell you [illegible] Mr. [illegible] I was [illegible] to leave The [illegible] of minor details," I said suddenly to Jim as we silently dined.

"I'd forgotten Perry for the moment," he said. "Is he so much on your mind that you have have to drag him back when I'm thinking of other things?"

"You looked so distant I couldn't stand it any longer," I replied. "I thought you were still—worrying over the tea this afternoon."

"I've decided that it's not important how you amuse yourself," Jim said, still more coldly, "I've something else on my mind just now."

"Did a little green dryad with flying gold hair come and peek in the window at you?" I asked.

"How did you guess?" Jim demanded.

"I saw her too this afternoon."

"This afternoon?" Jim asked [illegible].

"At Mr. Perry's," I replied, recognizing the need of venturing back on dangerous ground.

"Oh, yes—at Mr. Perry's," Jim said grimly. "All roads lead to Rome—and to Perry."

"When his name came up the other evening, I had a queer notion that it was best to say nothing to you just then," I said, grimly. "We were so happy. It was so sweet to feel your interest in me and your concern over my trying to commute to town that I didn't want to go switching off into a long discussion. Every time Mr. Perry's name came up it got dropped again for something that concerned just us—"

"And doesn't Perry concern us?" Jim asked.

"He doesn't even concern me," I replied.

"Then what in the name of common sense do you mean by racing over to this place to tea and dragging Jeanie out here to chaperon you and handle the proprieties?" Jim flung at me.

"I didn't drag her out here," I said.

"No? Then why was she here when it made her so furious to have to meet me?"

"Because she wanted to see Mr. Perry's pictures," I said in a low, almost bitter tone.

"Don't make me laugh. Since when is Jeanne so interested in art?"

"Does it matter what she is interested in so long as for once in all these weary months since her baby died she is showing some sign of—animation?" I asked.

Jim stared at me. His eyes widened and darkened. He put out his hand, seized the glass of water and drained it at a gulp. Then he began to laugh, curtly and scornfully.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

by Marie
Queen of Roumania

WHY RELIGION?

I'LL tell you why.

Life is a destructive power unless we meet it well armed. Religion is the strongest arm of all. It is all our principles for generations put into form. It's [illegible] rock to lean on, a signpost to show us the way.

Once a very modern mother asked [illegible] necessary to give children religious principles.

With a rather horrified [illegible] I had [illegible] I said "Of course."

"Why?"

"Well, [illegible]

It [illegible] to be told [illegible]

"Let us [illegible] I said. "Life is so strange [illegible]. There are pitfalls at every step. We [illegible] children out into the world as well defended against them as possible. It's like a [illegible] principles and religion are the ballast we carry on our boat to [illegible] we are strong enough to steer it.

"Later on, each man begins [illegible] conclusions, good or bad.

"We cannot prevent that, but we can start him straight, and the more ballast he has, the longer he [illegible] steady.

"By the time he has got rid of what some like to call 'old prejudices' he will probably be strong enough to build up for himself a new conception of things which will help him along. But it is an awful shame to launch the young into the world without religious principles.

"Religion is our strongest safeguard. It is a prop in hours of distress, a home to turn to when we feel forsaken, a solace in time of doubt. Besides, it is common good that all men have a share in. It makes of us brothers, children of one father, of one hope.'"

No "off-color" teeth when that dingy film is removed

Accept this remarkable dental test. You'll gain the dazzling white teeth and coral-like gums that make smiles attractive and inviting.

MODERN dental science has made important, recent discoveries [illegible] cloudy teeth.

In a few days you can work great changes in the [illegible] your teeth can give the [illegible] whiteness and your gums [illegible] you envy.

If you seek new beauty and new charm, test this new way. Do as millions are doing on dental advice. Multiply the value of your smile. Mail the coupon. A 10-day test will be sent you.

Beneath that film are gleaming, glorious teeth

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film, a viscous coat that covers them.

That film is an enemy to your teeth—and your gums. You must remove it.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It absorbs discolorations and gives your teeth that cloudy "off-color" look.

Germs by the millions breed in it and lay your teeth open to decay. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and gum disorders.

[illegible] regardless of the [illegible], your teeth [illegible] unattractive.

New methods remove it And Firm the Gums

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, dental science has discovered effective combatants. Their action is to curdle the film and remove it, then to firm the gums.

Ordinary methods fail in these results.

Thus the world has turned, largely on dental advice, to this new method.

What you see when that film is removed — the whiteness of your teeth will amaze you.

You are simply hiding the natural beauty of your teeth.

DAILY SHORT STORY

ONLY EVELYN

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

[illegible] ...le to [illegible] fast [illegible] of [illegible] ceed [illegible] and [illegible] had [illegible] If [illegible] going [illegible] not [illegible] over [illegible] and had [illegible] honor when [illegible]

In Sole Charge

[illegible] Denver; quite [illegible] where she [illegible] year with her [illegible] The last letter from [illegible] from Ted. It was all [illegible] with whom Ted was [illegible] And Mr. [illegible] stayed in New York most of the time.

Evie's designs became easier of execution when Auntie Con went to Winston Salem for a visit and left her niece in sole control of the Whitney domain.

Evie had no intention of staying there. The directory told her that Edmund Muir, broker, stayed at the Toronto Apartments: the looking [illegible] Mr. Muir [illegible] Denver [illegible] went to see Mrs. Grisdale.

Did Mrs. Grisdale know Mr. Muir? Undoubtedly. [illegible] Yes. He spent most of his evenings in his apartments down the corridor. She described him minutely [illegible] ingly. She formed a [illegible] plan but [illegible]

Evie rode up in the elevator that evening with Mr. Muir. She had timed him to a nicety.

Studying Her

Though he seemed to be reading a newspaper, she knew he was studying her from saucy green hat to little suede shoe.

He smiled divinely when she passed in front of him into the hallway and walked carefully ahead of him to Mrs. Grisdale's door.

"Dead easy!" she said when the door was shut behind her. "I've got him going already."

She begged Mrs. Grisdale to engineer a meeting right away.

He played into her hands. He came to call on her hostess on the pretext of returning a book. And Mr. Edmund Muir was presented to Miss Frances Gillen.

"It's a shame," said Mrs. Grisdale, "but I have to leave Frances alone the first night of her visit. I just have to go to a club meeting which would surely kill the poor child."

That was Mr. Muir's cue. Boldly he rose to it and well. He was more than willing; he was eager.

Evie hugged herself. It was such fun!

They went to the theatre, she and Mr. Muir; and Miss Frances Gillen exercised all the vamping-power she possessed. It would have conquered Sampson even after his blindness and disillusionment.

Mr. Muir was charmed. He was so attentive to her that she began to think the victory had been too easy. But perhaps his regard was just fatherly or—well, she would put it to the test.

Coming home in a taxi, she cuddled quite close to him appealingly, temptingly, with all the seductiveness that was hers.

No response.

He Yawned.

"Wood!" she said to herself, admiring him. "He's awfully good looking."

She rested her head on his shoulder.

Mr. Muir yawned.

"You're wonderful!" murmured Evie and took his hand confidently.

"Did you like the play?" He was maddeningly cool. "Miss Gillen. . . Frances?"

"Yes," sighed Evie contentedly, still holding his hand.

Mr. Muir did not kiss her goodnight; but it wasn't her fault.

In his room he leaned weakly against the door.

"Into the [illegible] entered then a [illegible] laughed with delight. "I [illegible] stand that very long. I'm only human. But. . . I'll have to isolate myself or keep her in the crowd . . . . little fiend!"

Mr. Muir didn't know the half of it. Evie was fast beginning to enjoy the fun.

The next evening when he had finished his dinner and was reading the paper as was his wont, a small cyclone burst in upon him.

He greeted Miss Gillen timidly and looked to see if his man was handy. He felt the need of protection.

He Turned Away

Evie pushed him into his chair, seated herself on its arm and draped her own lovingly about his neck.

"Oh, Mr. Muir . . . Edmund!" she murmured most ravishingly in a near-to-death tone.

He tried to read the news of France's war-debt problems.

"France is slow paying! Isn't she?"

Evie smoothed his hair.

"Edmund, won't you love me a little, please?"

He half raised his lips to hers; she bent quickly for his surrender; then with a supreme effort he turned away.

"I . . . you see . . . well, I do like you very much, Frances; but you don't really love me. Now do you?"

"Do I not?" asked Evie fervently and pressed her cheek against his.

Mr. Muir arose, nearly upsetting her.

"Here's the book you came after, Frances. Oh yes, you did!" Here it is, now. You must come again. You really must."

"I shall," said Evie dramatically as he turned her gently towards the the door. "I can't stay away from you. Is it any use my loving you?"

"Why, of course you must love me. Good night."

"Superman," sighed Evie with profound admiration when she had returned to Mrs. Grisdale. "I think I've tried him enough. He's awfully strong."

Alone, Mr. Muir discarded his paper and collapsed into his chair. His face told of a great struggle within. His lips twitched, he smiled, he laughed long.

Evie's visit came to its finish with the return of Auntie Con. Mr. Muir did not kiss her goodby. But she kissed him. He didn't dodge quick enough.

A month later the madcap was back in Denver. So was Mr. Muir.

The first night of his visit as he sat with Teddie, Evelyn went past the door like a streak.

"Only Evelyn!" repeated Mr. Muir. "I'd love to meet her."

Evelyn entered a few minutes after he had expressed his wish.

"From New York?" he said. Evie admired his coolness. He was a perfect stranger. They talked for a long while.

Unique Rings

"It is strange we never met in the big city—or is it?" he asked. "If I had seen you I should have known at once who you were by that triple-emerald ring you wear. Ted told me you had one exactly like hers. And I could recognize you by means of it for the two rings are a unique pair."

Evie said not a word. Instead she glared at the emeralds.

"Yet I did meet a girl," he continued, addressing Ted but watching her sister covertly, "a girl who had a ring very similar. I saw it in the elevator of the Toronto where I stay. I met the girl afterward. She was Miss——Oh, I can't recall the name. I'm sure it was not her own anyway. She was an actress. They usually take a false one."

"And I thought he was a superman," said Evie disgustedly when she had made her escape. "He was goofing me all the time!"

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.,

YOU may think that headline a very peculiar question, and, in a certain sense, it is peculiar.

"Of course I see what I see," will probably be your rather positive answer.

Do you know that one of the greatest problems of science has been to determine whether the scientist actually sees what he thinks he sees?

It is to answer this question in detail that magnifying glasses, microscopes, telescopes, spectroscopes and many other kinds of scopes have been devised and are in daily use.

It is to answer this question that consultations are held, chemical analyses are made, tests are applied.

Of course, many of these devices and methods are employed to see things that are not seeable by the naked eye.

But there are many things that are not invisible to the unaided eye that we think we see but that we actually fail to see with anything like accuracy.

It is known that lawyers feel comparatively safe in their cases of defence when they can get a number of eyewitnesses to the alleged offence, knowing that they will succeed in impeaching eath other on important points to the confusion of the prosecution.

A part of this variation is due, no doubt, to the different positions of the spectators with respect to what was going on. It is known, however, that the chief source of confusion is in defective powers of observation. There are comparatively few people who see objects in anything more than outlined, if we except the woman who seriously analyzes the costume of her rival. She can see the ultimate details at a first, but most comprehensive glance.

The powers of observation are best developed by looking at an object, registering its dominant characteristics, then looking at its important details and voluntarily registering them in turn upon the consciousness.

It is to facilitate habits of observation such as this that exercises in free-hand drawing are of extreme value. If the drawings are supplemented by exercises in coloring, by pigments in either oil or water, their value in developing the powers of observation will be greatly enhanced.

BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"I'LL simply have to set a trap for that fox," siad the Scotchman at whose house we were spending a few days up in the Highlands of Scotland.

"He's bad, is he?" I asked, hoping that I might be able to do something to prevent catching the poor fox.

"Yes," said the farmer. "He eats up all of my fowls and has destroyed some of my best hares."

At the mention of hares, Bunny shuddered and looked so frightened that I was really worried about him.

We were up bright and early next morning and the first thing after breakfast our host said:

"Let's go out and see what's in the trap."

We crossed a moor and entered a wood which bordered on the farm. The Scotchman led the way. We followed him into the forest and over to a clump of bushes.

Just as we reached the trap Bobby said:

"Look—look up in that tree-top. Isn't that an eagle?"

"A fine golden eagle," said the farmer, shading his eyes and looking up at the great bird. "He's got something in his mouth, too. Can you see what it is, Bobby?"

"Why it looks like a rat," exclaimed Bobby.

"Wonder what he's going to do with it?" I asked as the great bird left the tree-top and hovered over our heads.

"Maybe he's taking it home to his family for lunch," suggested Bobby.

We moved on to the trap now and instead of finding something with four feet and a tail there was something with two feet and two wings!

"That eagle couldn't have gotten down out of the tree without our seeing it," cried Bobby, "but it is exactly like it, isn't it?"

The eagles were identical—the one in the tree-top with the dead rat in his beak and the one which was caught in the trap intended for the fox.

"This is a strange state of affairs," declared the Scotchman. "I thought I had caught a fox and here is an eagle in the trap. They must like the same food."

"You're going to let him loose, aren't you?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said the farmer, leaning down to open the trap but holding his head away for fear of the eagle snapping at his eyes.

The trap unfastened, the frightened eagle flew up straight in the air and as we watched him soaring away in the sky the eagle in the tree-top spread his wings and joined him. The two beautiful birds floated away into the heavens like two disappearing aeroplanes.

"Funny—that rat," mused Bobby.

"Not at all," said Bunny. "Eagles are very loyal. That fellow in the tree knew his friend was in trouble so he was just bringing him a light lunch. Glad it wasn't one of my folks."

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.
No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

Resinol stops itching and makes skin clear and smooth
Piney Creek, N. C., Jan. 4:—"I had a breaking out on my face that looked like chicken pox. I suffered so from it that at night I would not sleep for hours at a time. I tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good until I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. It stopped the itching and burning instantly and after a few applications the skin peeled off and left my face clear and smooth, instead of rough and bumpy. I don't know of anything better than the Resinol products." (Signed) W. R. Mitchell.

FINANCE

BY B. C. FORBES

Why did the New York stock market, after its break, rebound on Friday to the highest price-peak in its history?

Mainly, I believe, for a reason that may not be generally credited. My own investigations have brought out that there was heavy buying by many powerful banking and other interests who sold heavily at much lower prices and were impatiently awaiting an opportunity to re-enter the market on an important scale.

Banker after banker told me at the opening of this month that he believed the upward movement was far from over, but that it probably would veer away from the more spectacular issues into the railroad division, the metal division and the oil division. They were especially confident that good rails would enjoy a substantial advance before the bull market ended.

These predictions have at least begun to be fulfilled.

During Friday's 3,000,000-share day, the third this year and the fifth in the exchange's history, the rails scored the greatest advance, almost three points on the average. The oils also were very buoyant. On the other hand, feverish irregularity marked trading in issues which have been the favorite footballs of the market's leading manipulators. Even the declaration of the 5 per cent extra dividend did not prevent General Motors from falling more than $2 per share at the close.

In the highest financial circles it is emphasized that security market conditions today cannot be compared closely with conditions in times past. Importance is attached to the tremendous increase in our national savings, to the amazing spread of customer ownership of stocks, to the very wide dissemination of knowledge regarding securities, also to the impending cutting of income super-taxes. As one international banker remarked: "Wealthy people who have large paper profits do not care to sell now and hand over so large a part of their profits to the government. Besides, what could they do with the money were they to sell out the securities which presumably they regarded as the choicest in the market?"

Business news continues cheerful. But it will have to do still better if earnings are to warrant a continuance of the bull movement in stocks.

Having outlined the attitude of the keenest banking brains in New York, would it be presumptuous for me to add that I cannot work up quite as much enthusiasm over the stock market outlook?

EASY MONEY IN WALL STREET FOR 'LAMBS'

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

We are all accustomed to hearing about the "lambs" getting sheared in Wall Street, but in the bull market that has now been under way for more than two years the "lambs" have been in many instances the ones who have gathered easy money, while the "wise ones" have "lost the market."

* * *

Men who have considered themselves authorities in financial matters over many years, more than a year ago advised consulting traders to get out of the market and await a more opportune time to buy. Those who took this advice are still awaiting that "opportune time." Many people who admit frankly they know nothing about stocks have been enriched by holding on through the upturn. All this recalls the well known adage about "hindsight being better than foresight." It is much easier, indeed, to view events backward than it is to see them ahead.

Boston Stock Exchange membership held by the estate of Edward R. Kimball has been posted for transfer to Lester E. Flint.

I have always found N. L. Amster, Boston director of the Rock Island and large holder of Boston & Maine and New Haven securities, very interested from a constructive standpoint in the nation's carriers. Mr. Amster says: "The railroads are, from my viewpoint, the backlog of this market. Industrial securities have held the center of the stage for some time, some of them advancing to unprecedented heights. The railroads, however, always represented the fundamental standard of America's investment wealth. They have had no great advance and many of the best railroad securities are today selling much lower than they did before the war. The public's lack of interest has been due to the fact that the railroads have, in the past, been legislated against and denied the right to earn fair interest rate on their property investment."

"Now the public and the government have changed their attitude. Both have awakened to a realization that the railroads are the backbone of all of our industries, and that we cannot have lasting prosperity unless the railroads participate," adds Mr. Amster. "I believe the incoming Congress will once and for all end the railroad problem which has been before the country for the past decade. Never before in history has the country faced such a constructive Congress as will convene next month, and for the first time in a generation the railroad question will receive honest consideration. The President and the leaders of Congress are pledged to constructive unification of the railroads as provided in the Transportation Act of 1920.

"The railroads will be put in position to serve the country adequately and economically and to earn at least 6 per cent. on their investment. With 6 per cent. on the property value, most of our standard railroad securities would be intrinsically worth twice their present market price," Mr. Amster concludes. "It is perfectly natural to expect that the public will begin to realize these great latent railroad values, and with the proper attitude of Congress the investing world will again seek to put funds into the transportation systems of America."

How trading on the Boston Stock Exchange has "picked up" is easily seen by a comparison of up-to-date figures. Saturday, for example, 25,561 shares changed hands in State Street in the two-hour session. A year ago, in a regular five-hour session, 18,928 shares were traded in, while in a five-hour session just two years ago the total turnover was only 5,710 shares. No wonder brokerage house employes expect the coming Christmas to be a day of unusual bonuses!

E. M. Hamlin has sold his controlling interest in the Stoneham Trust Company and has resigned as president and a director. The Hamlin share interest was acquired by Herbert H. Richardson, town counsel, and a group of Stoneham people. The bank has a capital of $50,000, surplus and undivided profits of $35,000 and deposits of about $1,000,000.

Here's How I Teach Piano

1—Learn Keyboard in ONE Lesson
2—Learn Notes in TWO Lessons
3—Play Music in ONE Week

And I'll Give You These Lessons Free —to Prove It

It's the easiest thing in the world to make promises—but an entirely different matter to fulfill them. That is why I give you this opportunity to try two lessons of my course absolutely free —so that you can see for yourself, in your own home—just how quickly you can become an accomplished piano player, studying my way. This test does not obligate you in any way—the lessons are yours to keep—put them to every test you desire. Be your own judge whether or not my promise—to make you an accomplished pianist in quarter the time usually required—is a mere statement or an actual fact. Just clip the coupon below, fill it out and mail today. The lessons will be sent you by return mail.

FREE BOOK— How to Learn Piano

In addition to the lessons, I will also send you an interesting booklet, which will tell you all you desire to know about learning piano. It also fully describes my method, and will show you many opportunities open to the accomplished musician.

Inventions—Save Years of Study

It will also tell you about my two inventions 'Colorotone' and 'Quinn-Dex' which have revolutionized the study of piano. Formerly a pupil was required to study several years before mastering all the keys—or scales.

With the 'Colorotone' you learn all the scales in less than a week's time. Thus saving years of study. 'Quinn-Dex' — a motion picture device, shows a pupil at all times how to strike the keys properly.

These inventions are given absolutely free to all my pupils. They cannot be obtained anywhere else.

Why My Lessons Are Interesting

In less than a week's time I actually start you playing pieces from notes. Instead of giving you meaningless exercises, I substitute pretty tunes. Thus you are able to see definite progress—from the very beginning. AND—I don't ask you to just take my word for it—clip the coupon below and mail it today. See for yourself.

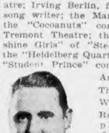
GREAT STARS IN BENEFIT SHOW PROGRAM

The greatest aggregation of stars seen on a Boston stage for several years will present the benefit show to be given at the Colonial Theatre on Friday afternoon, November 20, by the Theatre Treasurers' Club of Boston.

The master of ceremonies will be De Wolf Hopper of the "Student Prince" company at the Shubert Theatre. Those who will appear in in a series of novel specialty acts and striking playlets will be Fred Stone and Dorothy Stone of "Stepping Stones" from the Colonial Theatre; Elsie Ferguson, New Park Theatre; Madge Kennedy, Plymouth Theatre; Irving Berlin, famous popular song writer; the Marx Brothers of the "Cocoanuts" company at the Tremont Theatre; the Tiller "Sunshine Girls" of "Stepping Stones"; the "Heidelberg Quartette" from the "Student Prince" company; George Arliss, Wilbur Theatre; Francis Wilson, Jewett Repertory company; artists from the "School for Scandal" company at the Hollis Theatre; acts from Keith's and other vaudeville houses.

F. A. Grenier



F. D. Orvitt

The Benefit Show is conducted to add to the emergency relief fund, used by the Theatre Treasurers' Club to assist sick members and those of their organization who are in need, and dependents of any who die.

All stars in all companies playing in Boston willingly volunteered their services and it was possible to arrange an exceptionally brilliant program. The owners of the Colonial Theatre offered the use of the playhouse gratis and musicians and stage hands generously volunteered their services. Seats are now on sale at the Colonial Theatre. All box office employes in all theatres in Boston are members of the club. The officers are Ernest A. Grenier, president, Colonial Theatre; Frank D. Orvitt, vice-president, Tremont Theatre; Thomas E. Roche, secretary, Colonial Theatre; Hugo W. J. Lundgren, treasurer, Shubert Theatre.

STOCK EXCHANGE SEATS BRING HIGHER PRICES

New York, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—The refusal of New York Stock Exchange brokers to permit an expansion of membership today sent the price of seats soaring to a record height. Exchange officials admitted that the sale of a membership had been arranged for $150,000, which compares with the previous record of $135,000. The name of the purchaser will not be revealed until the transaction has been formally approved later in the week.

A proposal of the Board of Governors to sell 25 new Stock Exchange seats at prices ranging from $135,000 to $140,000 was overwhelmingly defeated by the membership last week.

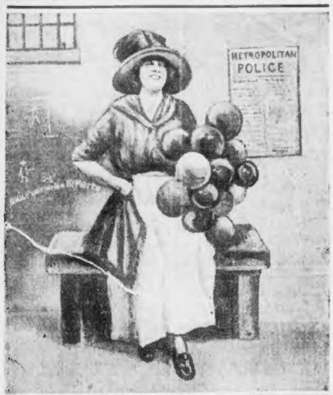
Miss Helen B. Merry

An English Officer Made This Picture



What would you call this picture? The soldier who made it calls it "Smile Like Helen B. Merry."

Officers and plain soldiers of the British Army have recently exhibited "Soldier Paintings," the first exhibition ever held of pictures made exclusively by soldiers. This is a sample of the military art.

Lieutenant-Colonel Owen-Lewis, who painted it, calls it "La Joconde," borrowing the title from Leonardo da Vinci's world-famous painting, once stolen from the Louvre in Paris.

The intention of the artist, apparently, is to show courage rising above unpleasant surroundings. The lady who sells toy balloons for a living, and who has temporarily suspended business, on account of being locked up, sits on the bench of a police station cell, and beside her on the wall as a sub-title for the picture is written "Smile Like Helen B. Merry." This unfortunate woman's smile is different from the mysterious smile of Leonardo's Joconde that has puzzled artists and critics for several hundred years.

There is no puzzle in THIS picture or in this smile. The lady says, "All right, LOCK me up, and still I will smile like Helen B. Merry."

It shows the pitiful defiant courage that fights against misfortune, seeking to take what comes in the best spirit.

She was arrested perhaps for drinking. In England where they don't arrest women for being "impertinent to an officer," the policeman over there only smiles and says, "run along."

This woman, according to the theories and accepted views of "English ladies," is now disgraced, because she lands in the lockup, but she still smiles, defiantly. You may say that there is nothing admirable about her smile, nothing to be admired in her defiance.

Yet, such women as this gave to thousands the courage that enabled them to smile when they were in the trenches, or when a piece of shrapnel had torn away part of their body.

Where the Navy Gets Its Men

Many Come From a Famous Shoe Town, 18 Miles Up the Merrimac

What makes New England cities and towns as interesting as New England weather is that each and every one carries one feather in its cap brighter than all the others. This community makes chairs; that one, toys; the next one, silverware, or cigars, or the finest textile machinery in the world.

Our village was the birthplace of a great poet, yours of a celebrated historian.

Today comes Haverhill, long and justly famous as one of the great shoe cities of America, to say that although she is properly proud of her eminence in industry, she is prouder still of the discovery that she is doing more than her share towards keeping the Navy ship-shape.

The magnificent contribution of the Slipper City and its immediate suburbs to the United States Navy is 11 officers and 186 enlisted men! In proportion to population, Haverhill believes, no other city in the country can match these figures.

What makes YOUR town remarkable?

If A-Hunting You Would Go

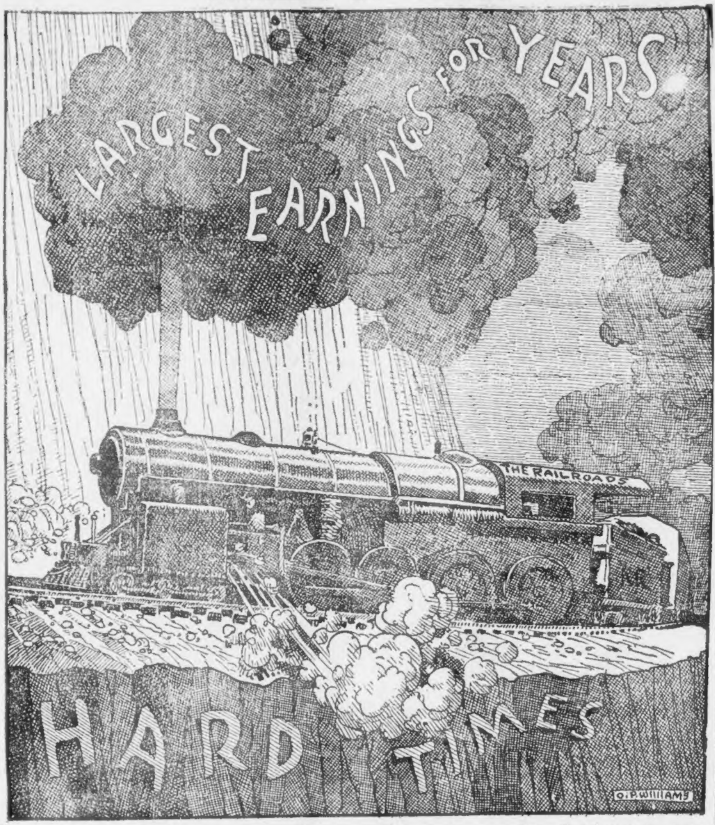
Maine Reports Plenty of Deer

Your deer is still waiting for you in Maine, or, if you prefer, your black bear.

Disturbed by reports which they understand are being circulated in Massachusetts and Connecticut, to the effect that deer hunting in Maine is "impossible," officers of the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game call attention to the record of rail shipments through Bangor, alone. With a limit of one deer to one person, this year's figures are 319 deer and 24 bear, as compared with 338 deer and 28 bear on the corresponding date in 1924, when each hunter was permitted to take two deer.

Records of shipments by automobile are not complete, but enough is known to prove that Northern New England is maintaining its supremacy as profitable hunting-ground.

Making the Grade



It has been a long, hard pull for the railroads. Their triumphant survival justifies those who held that they should not have been granted special favors at the expense of the rest of the economic community.

They cried pitifully for increased rates a few years ago. But the farmers and the shippers saw in increased rates a serious handicap to their own prosperity.

Railroad managements have effected economies of operation. They have devised newer and better methods of handling business. Many old, futile and costly rivalries are now to be wiped out.

They are now close to the top of the grade. They are finding their proper place in the economic system.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A LARGE western city has just passed a curfew law forcing every married man to be home at ten o'clock. There are hundreds of husbands that this new ruling won't effect. Lots of them can't get out.

A WIFE can pass laws that a city wouldn't dare to make.

IF a man breaks a municipal ordinance the city can arrest him, but they can't nag him.

THEY'RE not allowed to butt into a wife's business.

THIS new curfew law is a fine thing. Any married man who's on the streets after ten o'clock at night is out for no good reason.

IF the police catch him he either has to go home or go to jail. He usually goes home because the cops don't give him any choice in the matter.

THE married men are smart. As soon as the curfew rings, they run into the nearest house.

THE law neglected to state whose home a husband had to be in.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Elsie Robinson

SHE sat down very precisely on the edge of the chair and apologized for intruding. She had a lace jabot at her throat and above it the soft, withering skin was mottled with pink blotches of nervousness.

The nervousness was filming her eyes, too—those helpless blue eyes that made her seem sixteen instead of forty. In spite of her flesh and sagging line of profile, there was a queer illusion of girlishness about her. Like a lost child—but that was silly. A great big woman like that was no child. Then she began to talk and one was surer than ever that here was a lost child.

WHAT EXPERIENCE HAVE YOU HAD?
NONE— BUT I MUST EAT.
ELSIE ROBINSON

"I hardly know how to begin," she faltered, picking at a little ruffled bag with fluttering fingers. "I suppose you'll think I'm terribly stupid——"

Her voice was apologetic—she tried to laugh. But behind the laugh there stood a Fear. A hideous, naked Fear that would not budge. And presently her reserve broke and she let me see it clearly.

SHE WAS AFRAID SHE WAS GOING TO STARVE.

Just that.

I thought she was joking—surely it was one of those foolish manias that sometimes beset well fed, middle-aged women. But it wasn't. It was the truth and she had every reason to fear it. She had actually eighteen dollars between life and—that. And not a friend or relation within a thousand miles. She had come to the city with her husband to take up a new business. They had a tiny capital—just enough to see them started. Then he'd fallen ill—there had been a long sickness. And now he was dead and there she was.

Yes, she'd been looking for work. But everywhere she went they asked the same terrible question—

"WHAT EXPERIENCE HAVE YOU HAD?"

All of which cries the warning—DON'T RAISE YOUR GIRL TO BE A LADY! Give her some definite, serviceable training along a marked line.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland.

THOSE whom jazz hath joined together are forever asking the lawyers to put them asunder.

* * *

The heart of a man under twenty-five is like a punching bag; it's easily started "going," but it is almost impossible to make any lasting impression upon it.

Helen Rowland

There never yet lived a man who didn't think that he could nonchalantly "cut the wire" of romance—and then come back and turn on the current, at his own sweet will.

* * *

The first sign of a fading infatuation is when a man looks irritated instead of pleased when you brush your feather fan in his eyes, rumple up his hair or leave powder marks on his coat lapel.

* * *

A man drops down from the flights of romance to the humdrum of matrimony as easily and gradually as a parachute performer—but, somehow, a woman always feels as though she had taken a nose-dive and the motor had stalled.

THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Potato Situation

To the Friend of the People:

After reading the very interesting news about the potato situation, we felt that a few words as to the exact situation would be appreciated by your fair newspaper, which always takes the right side of any controversy, or any movement for good.

The reason that the potato market has dropped off considerably is due to the fact that the dealers here are loaded down with potatoes that they cannot move very freely, as every car has to be racked over and the frozen stock taken out, so that the people will get the quality they are entitled to. They cannot buy additional suplies until they get this stock that shows frost cleaned up.

They did not hoard them by any means, as it takes $1,600 to $1,800 to buy a car of potatoes and the dealers here are not financially strong enough to hold many cars at these prices to enjoy the small profits that they usually get for handling a commodity of this great value.

Improvements Suggested

To the Friend of the People:

I would like to see these improvements in Boston. A new postoffice building, either on the present site or farther up in the business section; that back street on Beacon street, along riverfront widened into a thoroughfare for all kinds of vehicles; no parking on Tremont street side of Boston Common, and every encouragement for the building of more hotels in Boston.

JOHN B. BAILEY, Boston.

Pension for Clergy

To the Friend of the People:

All honor to the Unitarians and Methodists of this city in the way that they are taking care of their aged clergy. They make no distinction in giving them their best during their declining years. After having studied the pension system in all denominations, I give this honor to the above denominations on account of the invidious distinctions in the pension fund of another church which has resulted in humiliating many clergy in that denomination.

Tears and Laughter

To the Friend of the People:

Pastor J. W. Brougher of Los Angeles said the other day in a Boston address, the more you make women cry, the more you can get money out of them for religious work.

Some men have a way of making women cry. They play upon their emotional nature, say sweet things to them, just to win them over to their way of thinking. But men are just as flexible in their way. The more you make a man laugh, the more you will get out of him.

TWO PATHS TAKEN BY THE AMBITIOUS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

ARE you ambitious to amount to something in life?

If you are, an excellent motto to remember is this:

"Never mind what others do. Do better than yourself and break your own record from day to day, and you are a success."

It is right that you should want to be as "big" as possible.

The desire to make a splash when you jump in the puddle is a legitimate one.

Don't be ashamed of your ambition.

Lincoln many times admitted that he was ambitious. Longfellow wrote home from school that he earnestly craved distinction as a poet.

The way to get anywhere is to get out and scramble for it.

Everyone should be ambitious.

But a temptation which the ambitious person must resist is suggested in the motto above.

The gratification of the desire to appear big is sough in two different ways.

One is to make yourself so big that you stand out from those around you.

The other it to attempt to make those around you look small, so you will appear big by comparison.

One method is good; the other bad.

One method takes the form of selfgovernment, work and study, of actual growth and increased capacity.

The other becomes active envy. It depreciates the achievements of others. It makes light of their abilities and refuses to recognize their worth.

In almost every office or organization where men are employed and are struggling to get ahead, representatives of these two methods of procedure are to be found.

At a board meeting of a big steel concern years ago one of the influential members spoke up and declared:

"The only way to deal with labor is whenever it shows its head, hit it!"

Some people, ambitious to get ahead, work on the principal that the only way to deal with ability in those around them is to hit it whenever it shows its head.

But such a program is as archaic and unintelligent as a similar dealing with labor.

The ambitious men who really attain their ambitions are almost always men like Charles M. Schwab, J. C. Penny, and Henry Ford, who encourage the capacity of those around them and rise with them.

If you are ambitious, it will be worth your time to memorize the motto given at the head of this article.

It is breaking your own record from day to day that brings success, not attempts to minimize the achievements of others.

SETTING THE RIVERS TO WORK

By Garrett P. Serviss

IT is the kind of story I like that the U. S. Geological Survey tells about the adventures of its engineers during 1923. Running the rapids of the Canon of the Colorado, and of other wild Western streams and exploring the mountains not for sport but for science and the progress of industry.

That is life! It calls for brains and purpose as well as for strength, activity and courage. Believe me, much of its charm would quickly evaporate if these things were done merely for sport and exercise.

Savages have wild life in that form all the time, but lacking foreseeing purpose, they wear out their days in humdrum, unintelligent enjoyment. Then along comes the engineer, with the whip of knowledge in his hand, and nature springs to her feet for him, and begins to reveal her secrets and her hidden powers.

Full of It.

Falling water! Running water! The mountains and hills are full of it, and every gallon of it is full of mechanical energy. Sun-born, since it is the energy of the sunbeams that release it from the seas, to be carried cloud-high and mountain-high, there to change into rain, and so into fountains, streams and rivers.

The sun first vaporized it; then gravity forces it skyward; then lowering temperature rechanges it to water; then, finally, gravity again takes charge and brings it back to sea-level, in millions of leaping rapids, cataracts and shutes.

While primitive man was disputing the possession of his cavern homes with prehistoric beasts, and making cunning tools, weapons and ornaments of flint, ivory and bone, admirably done even to modern eyes, the waters were falling and flowing all about him, yet he did not contrive the simplest water-wheel to recover and utilize that roaring, murmuring, and chattering energy.

The world had to wait for the engineer—and he was a late product. But now we have him—knowing mechanics, master of the laws of electric energy, inspired by the swiftness of his conquests—and, at sight of him, the cataracts and rivers begin to bow to human wishes.

Think of it! Last year the exploring parties of the Geological Survey discovered two and a half millions of utilizable horse-power running to waste in the Colorado and other Western rivers. And there is more where that was found. As time goes on, and our means of utilizing the power of flowing water become more complete and searching, an abundance of such power will be found, still undiscovered or unused, in all parts of the country, wherever there are hills and streams.

We are not alone in the search. Over the whole world the engineers are on the trail. In the periodical press of France, where I am at the present writing, one continually sees the words "houille blanche," or "white coal," the somewhat far-fetched term invented to popularize the effort to make the power of the rivers and waterfalls available to industry in the place of coal.

In the Alps, the Pyrenees, the south-central mountains, where Caesar and Vercingetorix fought, the gleam of the "white coal" has come to possess a new inspiration for all beholders, since they see in it the promise of more power for the country.

In Italy

In Italy, with its long, high spine of the Apennines, and with its broad northern shoulders lying on the main Alps, the wealth of water of industry because of the power concentrated in her mighty peaks. Think of the energy of a glacier, forever pressing downward with a power is very great, and Italian ground under a millstone, and then supposed the ingenuity of modern science capable of putting a glacier to work by the intermediation of electro-magnetic energy.

The giant called Mont Blanc has the strength of an Atlas, slow and irresistible—it may be that, one day, we shall see him, too, with his white-hooded brethren, laboring in the enginer's harness!

A MEAN SPIRIT DESTROYS GOOD FRIENDSHIP

You wonder why it is that almost invariably you have trouble with those with whom you have to associate for any length of time.

Often the thought comes that perhaps little quarrels are rather enjoyed by you.

When you were younger you had frequent breaks with your best girl.

Or you tired of your best beaux so fast that you could not keep track of them any length of time.

Indeed you get so tired of a routine that upheaval seems preferable.

Discussions over trivial matters often result with you in anger that you take no pains to conceal.

After the disturbance is over you feel ashamed and sorry. You may harbor no ill feelings yourself, but the one you have offended does not take it so lightly.

You have no ill-will in your heart, why should others have?

Yet you rather enjoyed the excitement of nagging and ragging and teasing 'till it hits fire and starts a quarrel.

A rumpus was your pleasure, but a scar was left on the heart of a friend.
